CHINA GIVEN MANCHURIA IN RUSSIAN PACT

Chiang's Regime Wins Soviet Nod

CHUNGKING, Aug. 26 (AP) — The Chinese government announced tonight the terms of an historic, 30 year Russian-Chinese friendship treaty binding Russia to give aid to China solely thru the Chungking government—to the exclusion of the northern China communist regime — and providing for complete Russian recognition of Chinese sovereignty in Manchuria.

Mao Tse-tung

[The treaty also was announced in Moscow, where it was signed Aug. 14. The Moscow radio said Premier Stalin was present at the signing and that the documents were ratified by the presidium of the supreme soviet on Aug. 24.]

The pact was viewed here as likely to effect a peaceful settlement of Chungking-Chinese communist differences which had threatened civil war.

Red Chief Agrees to Parley

The Chinese communist leader, Mao Tze-tung today agreed to come to Chungking from Yenan for a conference with Chiang, the Chungking World News said.

The reply of the communist leader came after Chiang had appealed to him three times to come here personally for a face to face discussion.

Main points of the pact and correlated agreements:

1. Russia to give military supplies and moral support to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's government.

2. Russia to withdraw from Japan's stolen empire of Manchuria within three months after Japan's formal surrender.

3. Russia to keep hands off China's internal affairs.

4. The Manchurian city of Dairen to be established as a free port, open to all nations, but administered by China.

5. The key Manchurian harbor city of Port Arthur to be used jointly by Russia and China as a naval base.

6. The Chinese eastern and southern Manchurian railroads to be operated jointly by Russia and China.

Plebiscite in Mongolia

7. China to recognize the independenc of Outer Mongolia if a plebiscite there confirms the people's desire for independence.

8. Russia to respect Outer Mongolia's political independence and territorial integrity.

9. Russia to avoid interference in the internal affairs of Sinkiang province, between Mongolia and Tibet, which embraces Chinese Turkestan.

Automatic Renewal Provided

The pact provided for its own renewal automatically for "an unlimited period" unless, within a year of its expiration date, one signatory notifies the other that it desires to

Congress Set to Seek Slash in Army Size

Draft Calls

Washington, D. C., Aug. 26 [Special] — Draft Director Hershey said today September draft calls will be for 63,000 men, with 13,000 of these going to the navy and 50,000 to the army. The war department issued a statement that it will need 50,000 men a month indefinitely, regardless of whether the occupation of Japan is peaceful, in order to carry out the army's functions during the occupational period. The statement envisioned a new army composed of recent inductees and volunteers, saying the only alternative is to hold for extended periods men who already have put in long and arduous service.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 26—A violent clash between the army and congress and the demobilization program is expected tomorrow when the house military affairs committee meets in closed session to consider the post-war policy for the army.

Rep. Shafer

Members of the committee were summoned to secret sessions, well in advance of the reconvening of congress Sept. 5, reportedly at the suggestion of President Truman, for the purpose of settling such problems as the legal duration of the war, the peace time strength of the army, the status of the draft, returning soldiers from foreign stations, and general demobilization. War department spokesmen will appear before the committee during the week.

Early arrivals for the sessions indicated that members of congress will voice vigorous demands for rapid return of soldiers to civilian life and a speedy end to emergency powers vested in the chief executive.

Doubt Need of So Many

The center of the expected battle with the army high command is the authoritatively reported general staff decision to retain 2,600,000 men in the army to occupy defeated countries and to man American posts at home and abroad.

Committee members are preparing to challenge the maintenance of an army at more than nine times pre-war strength after victory has been won and the world is at peace, particularly because the army program contemplates sending abroad men who have seen foreign service.

Must Relinquish Power

Rep. Shafer [R., Mich.], one of the first arrivals for the committee sessions, announced he will fight for discharge of all men who have been in service two years. He also will call for a halt of the draft or at least an end to drafting youths 18 and 19.

UNCLE SINBAD

.....a sailor named Sinbad was cast upon an island inhabited by an Old Man who liked to ride upon the shoulders of other people. "Please, O, please! Give me a piggy-back ride!" wailed the Old Man of the Sea....
Sinbad complied; and, after a sufficient time, grew tired of playing horsie. He requested the Old Codger to walk upon his own two feet. At this, the Old Man flew into a tantrum which served as a painful reminder to Uncle Sinbad that this was the second time he'd been taken for a ride.

Gen. de Gaulle Will Be Feted Here Tonight

Gen. Charles De Gaulle, provisional president of France, will fly to Chicago late today for one of the major occasions of his trip to America to seek friendship and financial aid for his country. He will come from New York, where he was scheduled to spend most of the day, and will depart late tomorrow for Ottawa, Ont., whence he will start back to France Wednesday.

High points of his Chicago visit will be a banquet tonight, a parade thru the loop and a public appearance at the city hall victory plaza tomorrow noon, luncheon with the Chicago Association of Commerce in the Palmer House, and a meeting with the war-born organization, France Forever.

Kelly to Meet Plane

De Gaulle and his official party are expected at Chicago airport about 6 p. m. Mayor Kelly will meet the plane and accompany the visitors to the Blackstone hotel by way of Outer dr. The banquet will be served there.

Menus at both the banquet and the luncheon will feature Chicago staples, without wine. The question of serving wine, which French journalists raised when President Truman served them ice water, was not considered at all, said Corporation Counsel Barnet Hodes, who is in charge of banquet arrangements.

Palmer House caterers said the association of commerce had asked for regular fare and it had been decided that the end of the war would justify abandoning fish and serving chicken a la king.

Parade to Start at Hotel

Persons in the loop tomorrow may see Gen. de Gaulle shortly before noon. Mayor Kelly will meet him at 11:15 at the Michigan av. entrance of the Blackstone and present him with an engrossed copy of resolutions of welcome adopted by the city council. Army, navy, marine, and coast guard detachments will be in the parade to follow.

Three bands, provided by the army, the navy, and the coast guard, will play as the procession moves to the La Salle st. entrance of the city hall. The route will be north in Michigan av. to Jackson blvd., west to State st., north to Washington st., and west to La Salle st.

Foreign Minister in Party

Gen. de Gaulle, whose unusual height makes him easily visible, will ride in an 11 passenger open car with a high body. The French information service said he would fly to Chicago in a British airplane specially constructed for tall men.

The De Gaulle party includes Georges Bidault, French foreign minister; Henri Bonnet, ambassador to the United States; Gen. Gaston Palewski, chief of De Gaulle's personal staff; and Gen. Alphonse Juin, French chief of staff.

Besides Mayor Kelly and Corporation Counsel Hodes, the reception group at the airport will include French Consul Joseph Viala, Jacques Walch, chief of the French information service in Chicago, and Mrs. Walter Brewster, chairman of France Forever.

Yesterday, in Hyde Park, N. Y., Gen. de Gaulle placed a wreath on the grave of the late President Roosevelt, then drew himself to attention and saluted. Gen de Gaulle was met outside the Roosevelt garden by the President's widow who, walked with him on his visit of tribute.

HURRICANE SWEEPS TIDES OVER LOWLAND ALONG TEXAS COAST

Corpus Christi, Tex., Aug. 26 (AP) — A 110-mile-an-hour hurricane from the Gulf of Mexico struck this Texas coastal area tonight, sending mountainous tides over lowlands and severing communications lines with some towns.

Indications were the fishing resort towns of Port Aransas and Aransas Pass, north of Corpus Christi, would feel the brunt of the storm.

The Houston weather bureau said the coast guard and state highway patrol reported streets at Port Aransas, on Mustang island across the bay from Corpus Christi, were four feet under water at 7 p. m. Chicago time. At Aransas Pass, on the mainland, the surf was said to be running-board deep.

No deaths or injuries had been reported in the area.

Blast Leaves Dutch Ship Sinking; Save Part of Crew

LONDON, Aug. 26 [Reuters]—Rescue ships from Holland are dashing to the rescue of the 16,000 ton Dutch motorship Christian Huygens sinking after an explosion off west Kapelle [Walcheren], Dutch radio reported tonight. Some of the 300 crew remained on board, but others took to the lifeboats and were picked up by the steamer Piba, en route to America with the first shipment of Dutch bulbs.

Planes Fly to Mukden to Rescue Gen. Wainwright

CHUNGKING, China, Aug. 26 (AP) —American army headquarters said today a B-24 and a C-47 transport had flown to Mukden to evacuate Lt. Gen. Wainwright and other men whom the Japanese held prisoners of war. The planes carried 5,500 pounds of supplies.

A Corny Trick Catapults Cat to Feline Fame

While the youngsters stand around admiringly, Baby sits in a sunny spot just inside the street level kitchen screen door and eats fried chicken and golden bantam corn.

J. C. Braly, 144 W. Goethe st., an automobile locksmith, who bought Baby for $25 last August when she was a kitten, said her tastes are peculiar.

Baby's No Milk Sop

"She doesn't drink milk unless I make her, and she hates fish," he said. "Baby likes meat, chicken if she's lucky, or beef if she can get it. I'd be ashamed to ask her to go chase a mouse."

Baby has an American Cat association pedigree that goes back five generations thru some tongue twisting names. Her maternal grandfather, Smutzig, was imported from Singapore by George Ennis, a Chicagoan. Her father, Emperor Shi H. Wang Ti, and mother, Bumly of Salang, are owned by Mrs. Mary Cichowicz, 2541 N. Central Park av.

Her fur is "seal point," which is a milky white color that runs to a black face and tail. Baby is blue eyed, and has whiskers two and one-half inches long, which give her trouble when eating hot buttered corn on the cob.

Eschews Mouth Harp System

Joyce Braly, 10, tied a napkin under Baby's chin yesterday and the cat showed a reporter and a photographer how she eats corn. Children gathered at the door and pressed their faces against the kitchen screen.

Baby chewed around and around the cob instead of eating the rows from end to end—the mouth harp system. When the cob was half cleaned, the cat sat up in the chair and washed her face and paws.

"She'd eat it three times a day if she could get it," Braly said. "She could eat a whole ear, I bet, but we don't let her stuff herself."

Carole Olney, 517 N. Rush st., who is going to be 10 Tuesday, turned away from the kitchen door and started for home.

"My cat," she was heard to say scornfully, "eats watermelon."

$8,000 Garage Fire Caused by Cigaret Near Gasoline

A cigaret which he set down while he siphoned gasoline was blamed yesterday by H. R. White for an $8,000 fire in his auto-electric service garage and repair shop at 6719-21 South Chicago av. As flames swept the one story structure, White, aided by passersby, removed two automobiles and a truck. Four other cars were damaged.

HALSEY HALTS FLEET IN SAGAMI BAY; RECEIVES JAP OFFICERS ON FLAGSHIP

Ryukyu Isles to Be Taken Over by Gen. Stilwell

MANILA, Aug. 27 [Monday]—(AP) —Gen. MacArthur, ready to land Thursday [Wednesday Chicago time] in the first wave of the occupation army today announced for the first time that United States troops will occupy the southern half of Korea.

[A CBS broadcast from Manila said: "Gen. MacArthur's headquarters understands that the first American advance troops are now in Shanghai. Brief word from the port indicates that Chinese troops are now policing the city, which is almost untouched by war."]

MacArthur told the Japanese to be prepared to surrender all the Ryukyus to Gen. Stilwell, commander of the United States 10th army. Under the supreme commander's orders, the Japanese were required to be ready for the surrender of Korea, the Ryukyus, and all forces in the Philippines "on or immediately after Sept. 2," the date fixed for the signing of formal surrender papers.

Will Occupy Kyushu

He likewise issued directives to the Japanese to prepare the way for American occupation of the Island of Kyushu, which he said would begin by sea and air Sept. 4 after an advance party lands Sept. 3.

While Tokyo propagandists yesterday were reporting "considerable numbers" of suicides outside the imperial palace, pilots flying low over the capital said people in the streets waved to them in friendly fashion.

The typhoon was thundering toward the Island of Shikoku along the route which 12 army transport planes will fly tomorrow, taking the first load of construction experts to Atsugi air field, 18 miles southwest of Tokyo, to make the field ready for the arrival of air borne occupation forces.

Another Storm Threatens

Another typhoon churned the Pacific midway between Okinawa and Iwo. It was bearing northward and was a latent menace to Japan's southern shores. A third beat itself out against the Chinese mainland.

In instructions to the Japanese, MacArthur disclosed that the 24th army corps under Maj. Gen. John R. Hodge would be the force occupying southern Korea.

The orders said Japanese field commanders south of 38 degrees latitude would surrender to Hodge.

Officers to Give Up

The Japanese will surrender to Stilwell on Okinawa, and those in the Philippines will surrender to Lt. Gen. W. D. Styer, commanding general of army forces in the Western Pacific.

"It is desired," MacArthur messaged, "that the senior Japanese commander in each of the above areas make contact with the designated commander concerned by the most expeditious means for preliminary instructions providing for the accomplishment of such surrenders on or immediately after Sept. 2."

Chicagoans Go to Japan

OKINAWA, Aug. 26 (AP)—Among the hundreds of troops who will fly into Japan with the advance occupation echelon are:

Halsey Says—

San Francisco Cal., Aug. 26 (AP) —A broadcast from the American fleet tonight said Adm. Halsey, asked if he had any message to send back to the mainland, replied: "You bet I have: 'California, here I come.'"

'Victor' Is Code Word for Yank Kyushu Army

BY JOSEPH HEARST
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MANILA, P. I., Aug. 26—American occupation troops will move into the "Kanoya" area around Kagoshima, on the Island of Kyushu after an advance party of 20 arrives in two airplanes on Sept. 3, Gen MacArthur announced today. These planes will use the call sign, "Victor."

Next day full occupation forces will begin arriving by air and sea.

To insure the safety of the advance force elaborate precautions were directed by MacArthur's staff. Not later than noon, Sept. 1, the Japanese headquarters is required to provide MacArthur, in the Tokyo bay area, a guarantee of full security for entry of the party into the Kanoya area.

Must Provide Guides

The Japs are required to provide the advance party with every courtesy and facility in the accomplishment of their mission, including guarded quarters on Kanoya airdrome and a police escort "in such numbers and so equipped as to insure absolute safety for each member wherever he may be."

The Japs also are to provide safe motor transportation, access for inspection purposes to any facilities in the Kanoya area the commander of the American forces desires to see, have available a hundred guides and interpreters for the party and provide free communication by radio between the American commander in the Kanoya area and MacArthur.

Before 6 p. m., Sept. 2, the Japs are required to advise American general headquarters that all mines, mine fields, and other obstacles to safe movement via all land and air routes into the Kanoya area and by sea via Takasu, Kagoshima wan [bay] and its approaches, have been removed.

Must Stay at Stations

All Japanese naval and other personnel concerned with the operation of ports in southern Kagoshima wan and approaches, including the port of Takasu, will be required to continue at their stations. Also all sea pilots in this area are to hold their normal stations and be equipped with charts.

In the Kanoya area all combatant Japanese units are to be evacuated and retain with limits their assigned bivouacs. However, civil police and the gendarmerie will be "maintained as necessary to prevent outbreaks of sniper fire and other overt acts and to prohibit and prevent any substantial gatherings of the populace."

All craft in Kagoshima bay are to be completely disarmed and breechlocks removed from all coast defenses, anti-aircraft, and other fixed or mobile artillery.

To insure safe entry into Kagoshima bay to the port of Takasu, a Japanese ship is to meet United States naval forces at sea by 3 p. m., Sept. 2, and lead the way. The Jap ship is to provide eight pilots supplied with complete charts showing the location of all underwater defenses, mine fields, and other instructions, who will be at the disposal of the American naval commander.

300 Yanks in Britain Ask for Discharge There

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Aug. 26—Tho at one time Britain played host to almost 3,000,000 American soldiers, only 300 of those left in the United Kingdom have taken advantage of a regulation whereby they may apply for a discharge abroad rather than return to America, army circles disclosed tonight. Those who wish to stay have jobs or families awaiting them here, or wish to study abroad.

Armada Stretches for Miles Across Enemy Waters

WITH U. S. THIRD FLEET, Aug. 27 [Monday] — (AP) — Led by the battleship Missouri, Adm. Halsey's 3d fleet steamed into the north end of Sagami bay this afternoon. Here they awaited the minesweeping of Uraga strait in preparation for entering Tokyo bay Tuesday [Monday Chicago time].

Rear Adm. Oscar E. Badger commands task force 31 of the 3d fleet, carrying the marines and sailors to the big naval base of Yokosuka, and will spearhead the entrance into Tokyo bay aboard his flagship, the cruiser San Diego.

Zero hour of the landing, he said, depends on how fast the minesweepers can clear the two mile and a half wide channel and the ability of the Japanese to carry out 3d fleet orders.

Parade Is Miles Long

The procession of American and British naval might spread for miles over the Pacific as it steamed into Sagami bay, the outer approach to Tokyo harbor, taking six hours to pass a given point. The sky overhead was flecked with 1,200 carrier planes.

The armada passed within three miles of Oshima, fortified island guarding the door into Sagami bay.

Close behind the 45,000-ton Missouri rode her sister battleship the U. S. S. Iowa, and the British flagship, the battleship Duke of York, with Adm. Bruce Fraser, commander in chief of the British Pacific fleet, aboard. Seamen and officers alike lined the warship decks, staring at the Japanese coast.

Receive Jap Envoys

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 26 (AP)— Adm. Halsey's flagship entered Sagami bay at 8:34 p. m. [Chicago time] tonight, correspondents with the fleet radioed tonight.

Halsey's entry was one day behind Gen. MacArthur's original occupation schedule, but a full day ahead of his revised program after he postponed occupation plans 48 hours.

Halsey's entry into Sagami bay followed by two hours the arrival aboard the battleship Missouri of 21 Japanese emissaries, who came out to receive instructions for welcoming marine and naval parties who will land at Yokosuka naval base, in outer Tokyo bay, Thursday.

111 Ships in Bay

Jack Mahon of Mutual said the entire fleet accompanied Halsey's flagship into the bay. Earlier, radio correspondents with the fleet said it hoped to anchor in Sagami bay, 30 miles south of Tokyo, by 1 p. m. Monday, Japanese time [11 p. m. Sunday, Chicago time]. Norman Paige, ABC correspondent, said the armada included five battleships, 11 cruisers, 26 destroyers, and 69 other ships.

Subsequent broadcasts said the United States naval men would go ashore at 6:15 a. m., Japanese time, Thursday [4:15 p. m. Wednesday, Chicago time].

Broadcasters said Halsey did not speak to the Japanese emissaries, reported to be two officers, 13 pilots, and six interpreters.

The Japanese were searched, altho they said they were not carrying arms. They were stripped of their samurai swords for the duration of the conference with Rear Adm. Robert B. Carney, Halsey's chief of staff.

Comdr. Harold Stassen gave the ship's crew a play by play description over the public address system of picking up the Japanese.

The emissaries, stiff and formal on deck, relaxed and chatted freely below decks. After the short conference, they were returned to their own vessel and the fleet moved ahead to Sagami bay.

Arrive on Jap Warship

The Japanese arrived aboard a Japanese destroyer and were transferred by a whaleboat to the United States destroyer Nicholas, which took them to the Missouri, which was lying 45 to 50 miles off the Japanese coast. A strong force of American carrier planes circled overhead.

"Early this morning," NBC Correspondent Joe Hainline said, "scores of warships, troopships, and supply ships, grouped in battle array, pointed their hulls toward Sagami bay. As I speak we're steaming toward a rendezvous with Jap army and navy officers to take place outside Sagami bay."

Rear Adm. Badger will command at Yokoshuka.

Hainline said part of the Japanese party would go on ahead to Yokosuka after the fleet anchors in Sagami bay, taking instructions from Halsey for dismantling forts, stacking guns, and shore batteries and evacuating armed forces. A few Japanese will remain with the fleet to serve as pilots.

After an estimated 400 mines have been cleared from Tokyo bay, Hainline said, the task force then would enter the bay thru Uruga strait, one of the most heavily-defended waterways of Japan.

Must Unman Guns

Badger was taking no chances, Hainline reported, and stipulated that every one of the 116 heavy guns along the strait must be unmanned and a white flag flown from each position.

Paige reported that in addition to the United States battleships the first force would have the British battleships Duke of York and King George V.

"Tomorrow [Monday, Chicago time] 25 more ships will join us," he continued. "They include five battleships, four hospital ships, repair ships, and special utility craft."

He said 26 carriers and other supporting battleships, cruisers, and destroyers would cruise off the coast while planes from the flattops covered the entry into Japanese home waters with an alert patrol.

"In 1923," Paige noted, "Badger as a lieutenant commander was first ashore in this same Tokyo bay to contact Japanese authorities in bringing relief after the earthquake that leveled Yokohama."

Race to Prison Camps

Simultaneously with Thursday's landings, Paige said, American welfare parties will race to the near-by internment and prison camps to release prisoners.

Badger's area of immediate control will extend over about fifty square miles. All Japanese troops will be treated strictly and any insubordination or mutiny will be dealt with promptly and severely.

All ammunition, small guns, and general war supplies are to be locked up with a representative ready to hand over the keys.

All of an estimated 100 midget submarines are to be in drydock with one authorized Japanese standing by each sub. These and the larger submarines, together with the battleship Nagato, the cruisers, destroyer escorts, and the smaller vessels, as well as an expected large number of suicide boats, will be commandeered immediately and disarmed.

At the naval yards 8,500 water and gasoline trucks are to be standing ready. All radio and other communication facilities are to be in good working order, as are the power plants and other utilities and the telephone system. Printing presses complete with Japanese and English type must be standing by.

Barracks, dispensaries, hospitals, and other main buildings are to be clean, empty, and ready for at least 13,000 American occupants.

A suitable office and headquarters have been demanded by Adm. Badger. Plans go far enough to even stipulate the Haygama imperial palace, across the peninsula from Yokosuka, as headquarters for Gen. MacArthur when he arrives.

New occupation areas for American forces

Aquitania Sails to Europe with Big Civilian Load

New York, Aug. 26 (AP)—The Cunard liner Aquitania is scheduled to sail for Europe tomorrow with its largest number of eastbound passengers since the outbreak of the war—433 civilians and 50 military personnel.

SURRENDER PARLEYS IN SOLOMONS AND GUINEA DEADLOCKED

MELBOURNE, Australia, Aug. 26 (AP)—Australian army headquarters announced today surrender negotiations on Southwest Pacific island fronts have reached a stalemate and probably will remain that way until terms are signed in Japan. A state of armed truce has been declared thruout the Solomons, New Britain, and New Guinea. Talks between envoys of opposing generals have been harmonious.

The latest allied estimate of Japanese garrisons in the islands is 86,000, but if figures given by the Japanese envoys are correct, there may be a total of 140,000.

Slow in Philippines

MANILA, Aug. 26 (AP)—Altho Japanese thruout the Philippines continue to surrender individually or in small numbers, there has been no capitulation by any large organized group.

RUSSIAN TROOPS OCCUPY 3 MORE KURILE ISLANDS

LONDON, Aug. 26 (AP)—Soviet amphibious forces occupied three more islands in the Japanese Kuriles west of the Aleutians today while other Red army units pushed along the rugged beaches of Sakhalin Island north of Japan and secured the port of Rutaka.

Moscow's 18th bulletin of the Russo-Japanese war, announcing these gains, said also that 35,000 additional Japanese troops, including six generals, had been taken prisoner yesterday. More than 400,000 enemy troops have been rounded up in the past eight days.

For the fifth straight day, the bulletin concluded: "The reception of surrendering Japanese units and formations continues."

Islands in the Kurile group occupied by air borne troops of Gen. Maxim Purkaev's 2d Far Eastern army, assisted by Pacific fleet landing parties, were Onnekotan, Shashikotan, and Matsuwa at the northern end of the chain.

250-Mile Leap by Reds

In their 250-mile overwater jump to Matsuwa from the Japanese naval base at Paramushiro, the Russians by-passed the islands of Harimukotan, Muchiretsu and Raikoke.

The Kurile chain, extending from northern Japan to the Russian Kamchatka peninsula, lies 750 miles west of the American Aleutians. Paramushiro and the adjacent island of Shumushu were occupied by Purkaev's troops three days ago.

On Sakhalin Island, lying 26 miles north of the Japanese home island of Hokkaido, the Russians were mopping up the last pockets of surrendering Japanese and Rutaka was occupied in a westward advance from the captured port of Otomari.

Moscow's bulletin made no mention of operations in Korea, where soviet forces yesterday took the big east coast port of Gensan, or in southwestern Manchuria where Red army soldiers were reported advancing northeast of the ancient Chinese capital of Peiping.

Fleet at Port Arthur

Moscow dispatches said the soviet Far Eastern fleet units were riding at anchor in Port Arthur and that Russian songs again were being heard in the streets of the naval base—40 years after czarist Russia lost the port to the Japanese.

Russian front dispatches reported that there still was some Japanese resistance in the southern Sakhalin city of Maoka. The Japanese, sabotaging the Russian occupation, were said to have set fire to stores and factories.

Soviet war correspondent Maj. J. I. Bolkov reported from Manchuria that most buildings in Hsinking, former Japanese puppet capital of Manchuria, were flying Red and Chinese national flags.

REPORTS 100,000 BURN TO DEATH IN TOKYO RAID

New York, Aug. 26 (AP)—Dr. Lars P. Tillitse, former Danish minister to Tokyo, said today that in a B-29 Super Fortress raid on Tokyo last March 10 "more than 100,000 Japanese burned to death."

In a radio broadcast from Copenhagen, Tillitse said "incendiaries were scattered all over the city, and the gale swept the fire from house to house. From my window, I looked into the roaring, flickering flames that devoured houses and trees and everything in their way."

Tillitse said "the most terrific raid on Toyko" occurred May 25, after Denmark had broken off relations with Japan. "My house burned down to the ground," he said. "I could not see a single undamaged house—only ashes. And Yokohama, Osaka, Nagoya, and many other cities look like Tokyo, not to mention Hiroshima and Nagasaki."

BORNEO DYAKS SAVE 12 FLYERS FROM THE JAPS

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 26 (AP)—Rescue of a dozen American airmen from the Borneo jungles by Australian cub planes was reported by Melbourne radio today. Friendly natives hid the flyers for almost eight months from the Japanese.

Melbourne, without listing first names or addresses, said the rescued were: Capt. Harrington, Lieutenants Corrin, Reuben, Robbins, Sheppard, Graham; Corporals Cafin, Knoep, Haviland, Nelson and Illarich, and a navy flyer named Harms.

The broadcast said the 12 survivors spent most of the time in a village of Dyak headhunters in a hidden valley. "The Dyaks succored the Americans and despite Japanese threats of torture and death refused to betray them." Four Japanese soldiers reached the village and the Dyaks gave their answer—four Japanese heads they showed the Yanks.

REVEAL DOUGLAS AIRPORT CAN BE DOUBLED IN SIZE

BY ROBERT HOWARD

Should Douglas airport, near Park Ridge, be selected as Chicago's post-war airport, an area approximately two miles square is available for the lengthening of runways and the construction of terminal facilities.

THE TRIBUNE this morning publishes the first photograph of the factory and landing field at which the Douglas Aircraft company manufactured and tested four motored C-54 Skymaster planes. With the war contract now canceled, civic leaders have urged that Chicago acquire title to the air force property.

Extended Runways Needed

The Douglas airport has four concrete runways, one of 5,700 feet and the others 5,500 feet long. Each is 150 feet wide and is capable of bearing the weight of any plane. To match facilities of Chicago airport, at 63d st. and Cicero av., the number of runways must be doubled and extended. Air line engineers have recommended that the Douglas field be improved.

On the existing 1,038 acre airport, the present runways could be extended 500 to 1,500 feet, aviation men said. The total area is 1,423 acres, including the manufacturing plant, administration building, hangars, and parking lots in the northeast portion of the property, where Higgins and La Grange [Mannheim] rds. intersect.

Possible to Double Size

The property could be doubled by closing parts of Bryn Mawr av. and Wolf rd. and relocating La Grange rd. Except for the Twin Orchard Country club's golf course just south of the present airport, the surrounding land is devoted to farms and occasional suburban homes. Since condemnation costs would be comparatively low, and since the location and approaches are ideal, immediate acquisition of the property was urged by Ben Regan, chairman of the Illinois aeronautics commission.

Lawrence av., now a mile away, could be the southern boundary, real estate men said, by vacating Bryn Mawr av. and Wolf rd., which are little traveled in that area. Wolf rd. was closed from Bryn Mawr av. when the Douglas runways were paved in 1942.

Higgins Rd. to Be Improved

Expansion westward is blocked by Chicago & North Western railroad tracks a half mile from Wolf rd.

The northern limits are Higgins rd., which is scheduled for early development as an expressway connecting with Chicago's proposed northwest super-highway. Angling northwestward, Higgins rd. is a quarter to a half mile north of Devon av. extended at the airport.

La Grange rd., which curves eastward at the factory site, is the eastern boundary. Additional room for runways and service facilities could be obtained, it was pointed out, by curving La Grange rd. farther eastward to the Soo Line tracks, which are more than a half mile away at Bryn Mawr av.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Aug. 27 [Monday]—British bobby sockers yesterday mobbed Tech. 4 Mickey Rooney, former Hollywood star. When he performed at a Colchester factory more than 100 girls rushed Rooney, tore off his jacket and tie, stole his handkerchief and gave him a thoro buffeting in an effort to obtain souvenirs, it was reported in Monday's American army newspaper, Stars and Stripes. After receiving treatment for a sprained ankle, face cuts, and shock, Rooney said: "Those girls scared the life out of me."

DOOLITTLE RAID HEROES FLY FOR U. S. FROM CHINA

Marvel at Lemon Pie and Hot Water

CHUNGKING, China, Aug. 24 (AP)—Three American flyers, heroes of a Japanese prison camp ordeal after their capture in the 1942 Doolittle raid on Japan, left for the United States today, speeded by a No. 1 air travel priority.

The liberated men—Lieutenants Chase J. Nielsen and Robert L. Hite, and Sgt. Jacob D. Deshazer—during their one-night stopover in Chungking tasted the comforts of civilization for the first time in over 40 months.

They spent the night in good beds with clean sheets in a house belonging to Prime Minister T. V. Soong, now used as a residence by American Maj. Gen. Ray T. Maddocks.

Marvel at Hot Water

It was a wonderland to the three men after their years as prisoners and long periods of solitary confinement. They turned on the faucets and marveled at the hot water. They read magazines with avidity and interest.

The American air commander, Lt. Gen. Stratemeyer, gave them new air corps insignia and shoulder patches. A colonel dispensed iced bottled beer—a semi-precious commodity in Chungking—and they gobbled toasted sandwiches between swigs.

"You're the bosses," Maddocks told them. "Sleep as late as you want, and have breakfast whenever you want."

For Saturday night dinner they had tomato soup, roast pork, potatoes, lemon pie and coffee.

Get New Clothing

"This is fine! This is fine!" Nielsen said, patting his stomach contentedly.

A colonel from Texas, Robert L. Johnson, gave each flyer three towels, three shirts, three pairs of trousers, shaving equipment, tooth brushes and paste. Johnson's son, a flyer, was taken prisoner in Italy and escaped after 20 days of solitary confinement. He talked to the three like a father, advised them to talk about their experiences and answer all questions, no matter how many times they might be asked the same thing.

"That's the only way to forget," the colonel counseled.

Answer Critics of "Chuting"

The gaunt airmen listened. They all have plenty to forget. They were brought here from Peiping, where a parachuted rescue team found them in a prison camp.

Johnson said some criticism had been made of parachuting the rescue teams to war prisoner camps before the Japanese surrender was signed formally. This caused Nielsen to remark:

"If they had waited another month, we would have come out feet first."

The three spent much time calculating how much their 42 months of back pay would total. They said their original orders were that they would be paid on a per diem basis until they returned to their permanent station in South Carolina. Nielsen said his allowances amounted to $450 a month.

"It might be a good idea," he said jokingly, "to stop over in India for a few weeks and let that pile grow a bit more."

MICE USED TO FIND OUT IF ATOMIC RAYS WOULD HURT WORKER

Bar Harbor, Me., Aug. 26 (AP)—More than 25,000 Maine grown mice were part of the "Manhattan project" which had a part in development of the atomic bomb, it was disclosed today.

Dr. Clarence C. Little, president and director of the Roscoe B. Jackson memorial laboratory, a cancer research organization which raises mice for medical experimentation, told the annual meeting of the laboratory that the war department received a large share of the 312,844 mice shipped from the laboratory in the last year.

Between 25,000 and 30,000 were used, he said, to determine if irradiation from the elements used in manufacture of the bomb would have any effects upon workers in the atomic bomb plants. The army still is continuing experiments with the mice.

30-YEAR NAVY VETERAN ON WAY BACK TO CHICAGO

Steva last served on Jinamoc Island near Leyte in the Philippines.

"I'm going on vacation with my wife, Martha," Steva said. "I've nothing else in view. I've been in the navy 30 years and haven't made plans for a new job."

A-BOMB FAILS TO STOP NAGASAKI TROLLEY CARS

OKINAWA, Aug. 26 (AP)—Lt. Col. Clay Tice Jr., of Phoenix, Ariz., reported today that street cars were running in Nagasaki even tho the Japanese city was pretty well flattened by an atomic bomb.

Tice and Flight Officer Douglas C. Hall, of Anamosa, Ia., 5th air force pilots, made forced landings on Kyushu Island yesterday and became the first Americans to land on Japanese home soil since hostilities ceased.

Tice said he flew over Nagasaki at 1,500 to 2,000 feet. He reported:

"It looked like any other bombed city. I flew over another Japanese city that looked just as bad and I've seen cities in France that looked as bad.

"Part of Nagasaki was completely flattened with one area bare, even of rubble, like an open field—probably where the main bomb blast was felt. But part of the city is protected from that area by a high ridge and in that part I could see street cars operating, school buildings standing, and people moving on the streets."

Know War Is Over

A B-17, piloted by 2d Lt. Edwin Hawkins of Bountiful, Utah, flew over Nagasaki the day after the atomic bomb was dropped but the crewmen could not see much because of an intense haze still over the area.

Hawkins' navigator, 2d Lt. Warren R. Wood of Lansing, Detroit, and Brighton, Mich., said the Japanese apparently know that the war is over. He added it is common now to see them on the streets or moving around in cars while previously they always ran for hiding when planes approached.

Tice and Hall were on a reconnaissance mission when the latter's P-38 developed fuel system trouble and they had to land at the Nittigahara airstrip on Kyushu. Hawkins flew in gasoline for Hall's plane and all returned safely to their Okinawa base.

Japs Seem Arrogant

"There were no towns around and only a few wrecked buildings. We were there two hours and 45 minutes and attracted a crowd of about 50 Japs before we left," Col. Tice said. "Uniformed youths like Boy Scouts brought us fuel pumps.

"What I didn't like was the Japs' attitude. They acted as if we were not at war. They were very polite and all smiles and held their heads up arrogantly. The only one who bowed to us was a civilian who got off a bike, bowed, got on again and rode away."

Wood took four snapshots of the Japanese and the landing party. He said he would return to Ie Island and get authority to give the pictures to Associated Press Photographer Frank Filan for radio transmission to the United States.

British Pastor Would Ban '1st Class Fares' to Heaven

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Aug. 26—Wealthy Britons who want to travel first class to heaven were condemned today by the Rev. Gilbert Cope of Coventry. Instead of three different fees for conducting the funeral service, he wants a standard charge for all. "Are we to imagine the journey into the unknown is like a railway trip where the wealthy travel first class?" he asked. "Will the first class funerals receive the personal attention of God and St. Peter, while others are dealt with by a deputy?"

MANCHURIA GOES TO CHINA UNDER RUSSIAN TREATY

Pact Made with Chiang's Chungking Regime

bring the agreement to an end. If it is automatically renewed, it can be terminated only thru one year's notice.

Sun Fo, president of China's legislative yuan [parliament], hailed the pact as an "epoch-making accomplishment" which he said would guarantee peace in the Far East for 30 years.

Fo said the conversion of Dairen into a free port, the joint Sino-Russian control of the railroads and the establishment of Port Arthur as a joint naval base were based upon "the relations between the two countries as military allies."

The Chinese people had been prepared for China's recognition of the independence of Outer Mongolia. The Chinese government actually has exercised no control in the area for more than a quarter of a century and the pact as it affected Outer Mongolia was viewed in official circles here as "an appreciation of realities."

Chiang declared two days ago that Outer Mongolia should be granted independence.

The area, rich in minerals, wool and furs, has been operating since 1924 under a constitution drafted along soviet lines.

Plan for Manchuria Rule

China will appoint representatives to establish and direct the administration in recovered territories in Manchuria, and will attach a Chinese liaison and military mission to headquarters of the soviet far eastern forces.

Under the treaty's timetable, China by the end of 1945 will have resumed full authority in Manchuria, an area nearly twice the size of Texas which the Japanese took over in 1931-'32 and incorporated into the puppet state of Manchukuo. The Manchukuo emperor, Kang Teh [Henry Pu-Yi], now is in Russian hands.

Railroads to Be Merged

Under the treaty, the main trunk line of the Chinese Eastern railway and the South Manchuria railway will be considered one railroad, to be named the "Chinese Changchun railroad."

Joint operation of the railway is to be undertaken by a single management under Chinese sovereignty, and as a purely commercial transportation enterprise. There will be a Chinese president. Its headquarters will be at Changchun [Hsinking].

China will have the responsibility of protecting the railway, and only in time of war against Japan can the railroad be used for transporting soviet troops.

Franco and King George Exchange Felicitations

MADRID, Spain, Aug. 26 [Reuters]—The Spanish ministry of foreign affairs has disclosed that Generalissimo Franco sent a message congratulating King George VI on the end of the war and the allied victory. Franco, the ministry said, received the following reply: "I thank your excellency for your friendly congratulations on a victory which has restored peace so ardently desired by men of good will."

Jungle Bonfires Signal Jap Surrender in Burma

JAP ENVOYS FLY TO RANGOON TO TALK SURRENDER

Discuss Details with Mountbatten Staff

RANGOON, Burma, Aug. 26 (AP)—Japanese peace envoys arrived in Rangoon today and began talks with Adm. Mountbatten's officers to arrange the formal surrender of 200,000 or more enemy troops in southeast Asia.

The enemy negotiators landed in two green-crossed white planes, escorted by seven allied fighters. The emissaries were headed by Lt. Gen. Takazo Numata, chief of staff to Field Marshal Count Juichi Terauchi, commander of Japan's southern armies.

They were met at Mingaladon air field by Lt. Gen. F. S. Tucker, acting commander of the 5th corps; Lt. Gen. Montagu Stopford, British 12th army commander; Air Vice Marshal Bouchier, and Maj. Gen. G. W. Symes, commander of the southern Burma district.

Makes Four Demands

The Japanese saluted and the British officers responded. Shortly after, the envoys were summoned to government house and talks began between Numata and Lt. Gen. F. A. M. Browning, representing Mountbatten.

Mountbatten, it was reported, was making four initial demands. They were [1] guaranteed safety for reconnaissance flights over Japanese held territory; [2] arrangements for mine sweeping; [3] unmolested entry of allied ships into enemy controled waters, and [4] the dropping of supplies to prisoners of war.

The negotiations are expected to continue at least until tomorrow and the final signing of the surrender of Terauchi's forces is expected to take place in Singapore.

French Are Represented

French and Dutch missions, it was stated, are represented in the negotiations in the interest of recovering their respective colonies—Indo China and the Dutch East Indies.

However, despite Gen. De Gaulle's plans for the reorganization of the government of Indo China and the reëstablishment of French control, the number and composition of French troops in southeast Asia at present was believed inadequate for occupation.

It was understood in Kandy that the British would take over until French troops could be sent to the theater from France and Madagascar. The small French units now in southeast Asia have been employed only in strategic liasion assignments.

The only American woman present when the Japanese planes landed was Flight Nurse Lt. Lucille Koca, 24, of 445 Dane st., Woodstock, Ill., who is on a special mission.

AIR MARSHAL HARRIS WILL RETIRE SOON AS R. A. F. BOMBER HEAD

LONDON, Aug. 26 (AP)—Air Chief Marshal Arthur T. Harris, commander in chief of the royal air force bomber command since May, 1942, will relinquish his post next month and retire shortly thereafter, the air ministry said today.

Harris, who directed the development of the R. A. F.'s heavy bombing offensive against Germany, will be succeeded by Air Marshal Norman Bottomley, present deputy chief of air staff.

The 53 year old Harris went to the United States in 1941 in charge of an R. A. F. delegation after serving as deputy chief of the air staff from November, 1940, to May, 1941. He was commissioned in the royal flying corps in 1915.

Wavell Arrives in London; Plans to Confer on India

LONDON, Aug. 26 (AP)—Viceroy Wavell of India arrived today for a three week visit during which he will confer with government leaders on a possible solution to Indian political problems.

HONG KONG JAPS TOLD TO GIVE UP TO BRITISH ARMS

MANILA, Aug. 26 (AP)—Headquarters announced officially today that Gen. MacArthur had directed the Japanese in Hong Kong to surrender to the British—a statement that had been denied by a spokesman only yesterday.

A headquarters mixup was blamed for the original denial.

A British Broadcasting company report had said that the Japanese in Hong Kong were ordered by MacArthur to surrender to Rear Adm. Cecil Harcourt of the royal navy. Hong Kong has been a British crown colony for more than 100 years, but the Chinese would like to have it back.

Two official spokesmen, when asked about the surrender report, looked thru their files, found no such message had been reported to them, and therefore denied the story.

Tonight's announcement disclosed that the message had been broadcast generally last Friday, and a spokesman said MacArthur was merely relaying a message from Washington to the Japanese.

Canton in Chinese Hands

CHUNGKING, China, Aug. 26 (AP)—Canton, great Japanese held commercial metropolis of south China, has passed peacefully into Chinese hands, reliable reports said today as 159 Chinese military and government officials flew to Nanking to prepare for Japan's formal surrender in China.

The reports did not state whether Canton has been occupied by underground forces or by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's troops, last reported 50 miles away, but branches of the national government were said to have reopened there under the new mayor, one legged Vice Adm. Chan Chak.

The Chinese high command announced that at least eight key towns thruout China had been added to the list of reoccupied Japanese strongholds.

Fly to Nanking

The big group of Chinese military and government men left for Nanking in seven transport planes from Chihkiang, 250 miles southeast of Chungking.

The mission will set up forward headquarters for Gen. Yo Ying-chin, commander of Chinese field forces. The Chungking newspaper Ta Kung Pao said the formal surrender of Japanese forces in China will take place in the pre-war Chinese capital Sept. 3.

The mission was headed by Gen. Leng Hsin, deputy chief of staff to Gen. Ho. Ho will fly on later and will accept the capitulation of Japanese Commander in Chief Gen. Yasuji Okamura.

OKINAWA GIVES YANKS TASTE OF JAP OCCUPATION

They're Strange People, Is American View

BY ARTHUR VEYSEY
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

ISHIKAWA, Okinawa, Aug. 26—What's it going to be like living with the Japs?

Twenty-nine hundred soldiers, sailors, and marines can pretty well qualify as experts in answering questions concerning life with the Japs. For almost five months they have been assigned to looking after 220,000 Okinawans.

Strictly the Okinawans may not be Japs but to the GIs, gobs, and leathernecks they are, for all practical purposes, Japs. How they behave here may be a tip about the Japs in Japan.

The 1940 census showed 350,000 Okinawans, mostly in the southern and middle sections of this 80 mile long island. Most of the young men and women have vanished, impressed by the Jap army as laborers. Here in Ishikawa, the largest present Okinawa settlement, probably one out of a hundred persons is a male between the ages of adolescence and wrinkles.

Natives Moved North

All Okinawans who survived the Jap and American armies have been moved on to the hilly, northern part of the island, the rolling middle and southern sections being turned into air fields and camps.

Moved by truck or boat the people brought all their personal belongings, eating what few cattle, goats, chickens, and pigs had survived the war.

Ishikawa was a town of about 6,000 frame, tile roofed houses set along narrow, tree lined streets which ran in straight rows. Now some 30,000 have been packed into the area. Women work in community gardens around the town, tote enormous loads on their heads, do the cooking and washing and nurse the uncountable children, while the men preserve the age-old male Okinawan custom of doing nothing but fishing.

Army Donates Food

Because most rice fields were destroyed the Okinawans now live almost entirely on the United States army's charity, mostly beans, cracked wheat, and corn.

The boss of the Okinawans is Col. C. I. Murray, Pittsburgh, Pa., of the marines. His operations officer is Capt. Edward Woodyard, Washington, D. C. To administer and police the Okinawans requires a force of 2,900 officers and men.

At first relations were touchy. The Americans believed the Okinawans to be traitors and fanatics. The Okinawans were certain that the Americans would kill, torture, rape, and steal. So they were slow coming out of the hills.

Instead the Americans set their broken bones, adopted the orphans and fed them. They were safe except from occasional raids — the raids staged not by Americans but by the Japs. So American infantrymen were called around the camps to guard the civilians from their own soldiers.

Little Sympathy Shown

The Okinawans, like most orientals, showed little sympathy for one another. There was no brotherly love. One day a child lay dying in the hospital the Americans had set up. The child needed a blood transfusion. Not a single Okinawan consented to give blood. At last a couple of navy corpsmen volunteered. This didn't happen many times before the Okinawans, apparently from shame, offered blood. The hospital now has a considerable blood bank.

Similarly the Okinawan men and women shunned the orphans, of which there are thousands. They let the kids roam. The Americans set up orphanages. Ishikawa's orphanage today has more than 100 children.

In the orphanages and hospital most nurses are geishas. They were virtually the only volunteers. They are quite capable too, army and navy doctors say.

Administration is carried on by Okinawans selected by the Okinawans themselves. These men who wear OCD air raid warden armbands as identification, pack a terrific wallop. Selected supposedly thru democratic procedure to administer democracy, it's hard to keep them from developing into tyrants.

Playgrounds Are Installed

To get some of the innumerable children off the streets the army has opened playgrounds. Supplies and personnel for schools are unavailable.

Stanch believers in private ownership of land and other properties, the Okinawans have taken displacement with a shrug. That amazed Capt. Woodyard until, in talking with many, he learned they accepted war losses as inevitable. Like a typhoon, war was something that had to be endured.

When Japan surrendered many of the natives cried. Their homeland had been beaten. Yet they continue to take orders as docilely as an old horse. And if there is malice it's deeply hidden. Since the day the army took the first civilian prisoner not one Okinawan has committed a single act of sabotage or attempted violence upon American troops.

Capt. Woodyard says there's only one way he can describe the Okinawans and that is that they are a strange people. Pfc. Albert Villegas, Sycamore, Ill., one of the military police here, sums up his Okinawan experiences this way:

"Treat 'em good and they're good people. Treat 'em bad and they're bad."

JAPAN REMOVES CONTROLS FROM ITS INDUSTRIES

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 26 (AP)—War time production shackles have been stricken from Japanese industry, Tokyo radio said today in reconversion theme broadcasts which also advised Japanese women to study, work, and produce more children.

Domei, Japanese news agency, reported Premier Prince Hagashi-Kuni and other government leaders would confer with the leaders of the Dai Nippon Political association tomorrow in preparation for the opening Sept. 1 of the extraordinary session of the diet.

Kitchen and domestic equipment soon will be available in Japan's stores, said the radio report, telling of the removal of restrictions on the manufacture of leather and metal goods.

"Don't Be Jittery"

The broadcasts did not ignore the approaching allied occupation of Japan, but also dealt with postwar problems and criticism of government policies. The Japanese received their daily portion of governmental advice to remain calm when allied forces arrive in their homeland.

Taketora Ogata, president of the board of information, ordered his countrymen "not to be unnecessarily jittery, but to have absolute faith in the government and attend to their respective work."

Ogata said that when the "allied forces occupy our homeland the government will be responsible for their food and housing, and there will be no direct contact between the allied forces and the general public."

Women Are Harangued

A woman commentator advised Nipponese women to "liquidate the narrowness of individual life which had been commonly observed among women in the prewar days" and urged them to study Japanese history and "pay more attention to politics and the trend of the world at large."

The newspaper Mainichi urged the government to give the Japanese people the facts concerning the nation's financial condition.

HEROES OF WAKE AND BATAAN SET FREE AT MUKDEN

Most of Them Never Heard of Truman

KUNMING, China, Aug. 26 (AP)—Heroes of Bataan and Wake Island were among the Americans released from Japanese prison camps who arrived here Aug. 24 and are receiving care by United States army medical authorities and the Red Cross.

Most of the Americans were brought from the Mukden area. Six were taken prisoner at Bataan only six days after reaching the Philippines. Some of the prisoners were suffering from malnutrition, others from tuberculosis and other diseases.

Many were concerned over the fate of their buddies they had left in the Philippines, and one said he hated to think of returning to the United States if it meant passing thru the Philippines.

Never Heard of Truman

Most of the prisoners at camps in the Mukden area slept on wooden beds with no clean sheets. They had little winter clothing and suffered during the cruel Manchurian winters.

Present plans are to send those in the best health back to the United States as quickly as possible. The rest will remain for treatment until they are in condition to be flown out.

A majority never heard of President Truman or Gen. Eisenhower. They knew nothing of the epic struggles of their comrades at Guadalcanal or Tarawa. Nor did they know that the United States had 10,000,000 men under arms.

They spoke in calm low voices and seemed to look into space as they recounted their years of imprisonment. Some wondered about the employment situation back home.

Suffered from Cold

The Wake Island prisoners, captured in the first days of the war, said 400 marines, sailors, and civilians were taken by the Japanese on the island. They were placed aboard the Japanese vessel Nita Maru and jammed into small compartments in the hold of the ship. The heat was terrible, they said, and the diet meager.

From Wake they were shipped to Yokohama, then to Shanghai. Those who reached Woosung, near Shanghai, suffered from the cold during the winter of 1942 but were helped by allied prisoners moved from Peiping. Some said the Japanese did not mistreat them unless they attempted to escape. A few American prisoners who did try to escape were court martialed, one being given life imprisonment.

Meets Old Girl Friend

The men taken on Bataan were said to have contracted nearly every known oriental disease.

The prisoners reported that sometimes Chinese puppets would help them escape and then turn them over to the Japanese, who paid up to 1,000,000 puppet dollars for their recapture.

One of the happiest men in the group was from Abilene, Tex. He came into a Red Cross club here and met a girl whom he used to know back in Abilene. The Red Cross girl, Jean Boyer, said she last saw the former prisoner in 1939.

Made Own Radios

In one camp the prisoners made one cell radios from batteries taken from Japanese telephones. Until the battle of Stalingrad they had newspapers of a sort and could hear English radio broadcasts, but after Stalingrad the Japanese seemed to realize they were on the losing side and took away the prisoners' radios and newspapers.

The Wake Island prisoners said the Japanese distributed questionnaires asking the prisoners what they thought the outcome of the war would be. The prisoners said the Japanese always showed great interest in their replies.

During the last days before the Japanese accepted the terms of the Potsdam declaration the prisoners said the attitude of the Japanese toward them changed. The Japanese told them the Japanese and Americans were the best of friends and when they were taken thru the streets of Mukden, Japanese cheered them.

YANKS TO FIND JAPAN CLIMATE ABOUT LIKE U. S.

New Five Layer Uniforms Hardly Needed

Families of service men destined to be stationed with occupation forces in Japan need not fear that the new five layer winter uniform recently displayed in Manila means their sons will be living in a sub-arctic climate.

Since the latitudinal extent of Japan, from the Kurile Islands to Formosa, is equal to that from Newfoundland to Cuba, the climate of the islands is extremely varied. In general, however, the winters in Japan are slightly colder than in states in similar latitudes along the American Atlantic seaboard. The summer temperatures, on the other hand, are nearly identical.

Almost the only other generalization to be found in studies of Japan's weather is that the islands have hot and humid summers and clear and cold winters.

Near Tropic to Extreme Cold

The extremes in the main islands extend from the nearly tropical regions in the southwestern area to the severe winters and short cool summers of Hokkaido far to the north.

The southwestern islands, Kyushu and Shikoku, almost opposite Shanghai on the China coast, have an average temperature during the humid summer that seldom if ever falls below 80 degrees. In January the temperature remains around 50 degrees. Rainfall is heavy, often totaling more than 100 inches a year.

In contrast to this are the prevailing weather conditions on Hokkaido. There the summer temperatures often remain just slightly above winter temperatures on the southwestern islands.

Heavy Snow in Winter

There are only about 120 to 150 frost free days a year on this island. During most of the winter snow covers the island.

In Tokyo, in the center of the main island of Honshu, the temperatures are about like New York City. The following table compares the monthly mean temepratures in Chicago and Tokyo:

	Tokyo	Chicago
January	27	22.2
February	38	24.9
March	44	34.5
April	57	36.9
May	62	57.8
June	76	68.1
July	76	72.7
August	78	71.6
September	71	64.9
October	61	52.5
November	52	37.7
December	35	26.9

Great Winds in September

Japan's typhoon season generally is in September when the tai fu [great winds] frequently occur. They come by way of Luzon and often attain a velocity up to 75 miles an hour.

FINAL WIPING OUT OF NAZIISM TO BE DISCUSSED

FRANKFURT-ON-MAIN, Germany, Aug. 26 (AP)—Gen. Eisenhower will open a three day "orientation" conference of United States military leaders tomorrow dealing with such subjects as the eradication of nazism and militarism in occupied Germany. Lt. Gen. Wade H. Haislip, commander of the 6th army group, Gen. Patton, commander of the United States 3d army, and other high officials will be present.

The conference will consider the charges that Nazis have been retained in key positions. This has resulted in some instances in mass protests by German factory workers.

Robert Murphy political advisor to Eisenhower, will be chairman at tomorrow morning's session. The afternoon discussions, to be presided over by Maj. Gen. Oliver P. Echols, chief of internal affairs division of the control council, will center around "development of democratic methods and attitudes."

PUBLICITY MAN SUES PYLE BODY, INDIANA MAYOR

Terre Haute, Ind., Aug. 23 (AP)—Gilbert Lawson of New York, who came here to direct publicity in a fund-raising campaign for the Ernie Pyle Memorial, Inc., filed suit for $25,000 damages against the memorial organization and others in Circuit court here yesterday.

Also named as defendants were Richard Condon, Inc., a New York publicity firm; the Terre Haute Realty corporation; Richard Condon, and Mayor Vernon R. McMillan of Terre Haute.

Lawson, who said he was dismissed from the memorial activity, charged that he was threatened with arrest, prosecution, and imprisonment and that one of the defendants foreclosed money due him, causing him embarrassment and injuring his reputation as a public relations man.

97 CHICAGOLAND WACS IN FRANCE ON WAY HOME

BY ANNE BRUYERE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, Aug. 26—Chicagoland WACs—97 of them—left Paris yesterday with 800 other service women for the staging areas of Compiegne and Le Havre. They will start for home immediately.

Romance waits for blonde Sgt. Geraldine Williams, 2226 N. Mason av., Chicago, who is going to marry her GI sweetheart, Pvt. Charles William Field, 4305 Berkeley av., Chicago. Field, who has 84 points, got a break. Transferred from the infantry to a tank division, Field was on the way to the Pacific when he was transferred home instead. He is waiting in Chicago for his fiancee.

Sgt. Williams, as she finished packing souvenirs from Africa, Italy, France, England, and Scotland, said:

"Chicago is the most wonderful place in the world. Other cities are so far behind that nobody would believe it. In Oran, the Algerian seaport where I went in 1943, there was just one wobbly trolley line. Men, women, and children sleep in the gutters.

South France in Ruins

"Italy was dirty but more interesting. I enjoyed seeing the splutter of Vesuvius, the gondolas in Venice, and the Pantheon. Southern France, where we WACs spent a horrible winter in 1944, was in ruins. We lived in broken down huts and ate cold rations in freezing weather.

"If it had not been for our wonderful major, Elizabeth Taylor, the girls in the 161st headquarters company wouldn't have been able to stand the nightly bombings and the bad food at Dijon.

"The first thing I'll do back home is ride the new subway. I hope it is more comfortable than the metro in Paris and the underground in London."

The Chicago subway intrigues all homebound Illinois GIs and WACs who have been away more than three years. Among them are Pvt. Lucile R. Willis, 8110 Wolcott st.; Pvt. Ann Nickolich, 2508 E. 106th st.; Sgt. Betty R. Klopfenstein [address unobtainable]; Sgt. Lorena L. Smith, 2335 N. Albany av.; Sgt. Frank Lewis, Cicero; Corp. Harry Winters, Morton, Ill., and Sgt. Gordon MacMahon, 1437 Howard st., Chicago, whose job with SHAEF was to accompany allied war correspondents to the front.

2,300 More This Month

According to an announcement made by Lt. Col. Mary A. Hallaren, WAC staff director, 2,300 other high point service women will return to the United States by the end of this month. The remaining 1,500 will sail in October.

A Chicagoan, Maj. Douglas D. Reid, 7347 St. Lawrence av., said there was little left for the WACs to do here.

"They will all go home as soon as possible," he said. "They did a splendid job while the war was on but the little routine work that's left can be done by French civilians."

MAY IS ACCUSED OF COERCION IN KENTUCKY VOTE

Prestonburg, Ky., Aug. 26 (AP)—Rep. May [D., Ky.], chairman of the military affairs committee, is accused of "using the power and prestige of his office" in behalf of a successful candidate in one of four election contest suits stemming from the Aug. 4 primary in Floyd county.

May was charged by Circuit Judge Henry Stephens Jr., who was defeated by Alex L. Davidson for the Democratic nomination for county judge, of "unduly intimidating, influencing, and coercing many of his relatives and friends" to vote for Davidson.

Stephens also charged May coerced citizens for whom he procured appointments as postmasters. He said "at least 1,220 of the 2,831 votes received by Davidson were obtained thru bribery." Stephens was defeated by 259 votes.

COURT TO VISIT MANSION WHERE QUISLING LIVED

Called Part of Profits from Betrayal

BY HAL FOUST
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

OSLO, Norway, Aug. 26—The court trying Vidkun Quisling for treason tomorrow will visit his 30 room mansion on a wooded hilltop in the outskirts of Oslo, overlooking a fjord. It will also inspect his country home in the mountains 30 miles from here.

The two luxurious establishments are described by the prosecution as part of Quisling's profits for having sold his country to the Germans five years ago. His suburban house, named Gimle, meaning home of the Viking gods, contained rugs, tapestries, and paintings by Rembrandt, Rubens, and Mignard, valued at $1,250,000. The collection came from the Norwegian royal palace, public museums, and from wealthy estates thruout German occupied countries.

Quisling's defense was that he was protecting the property against falling into the hands of the Nazis. Before the war he and his Russian born wife lived in a small apartment, and his total fortune was estimated at $25,000.

Second Week of Trial

Thus will begin the second week of the trial which most observers predict will end by Saturday with a sentence of death before a firing squad for the man whose name was introduced into the 1945 Oxford dictionary as a common noun meaning traitor. Against him is the sentiment of a country occupied by the German army and suppressed by the Nazis for five years while Quisling was president minister.

Also against him is the evidence compiled by the Norwegian government and the allied war crimes commission. Agreement by five of the seven jurors, three of them judges, will constitute the verdict.

Quisling's main defense has fallen on unsympathetic ears. He has contended that he was consistently a Norwegian patriot favoring neutrality that was threatened by the British before British plans were thwarted by the German invasion. He has contended that he assumed control of the government only because the king and his ministers had fled to London and that his administration was devoted to easing the burden of military occupation.

A damning document is the diary of Alfred Rosenberg, nazi party philosopher and member of the foreign office, which was brought here by the allied war crimes commission. It links Quisling with Hitler and other high Nazis in their decision to invade Norway on April 9, 1940. Some of the 1939 entries are as follows, with Quisling sometimes being identified by name but at other times as "Mr. X" or "Mr. Q":

"Dec. 11—Der fuehrer has been informed of the visit of Mr. X from Scandinavia. Mr. X states that feeling in Scandinavia is steadily becoming anti-German. The pro-English party is continually growing stronger. The Jew, Mr. Hambro [C. J. Hambro, president of the Norwegian parliament], continues to work against us.

Sent to See Raeder

"In Sweden the question of British fleet bases is actually being discussed. A case like that with Turkey might occur again.

"Dec. 14—Der fuehrer again summoned me to the chancellery to discuss Mr. Quisling's proposition. As a result Mr. Q was sent to Mr. Raeder [grand admiral of the German fleet]. We were agreed on boldness as well as the necessity of action.

"Dec. 19—First stage of planned Norway action is finished. On the 15th der fuehrer received Mr. Q. Der fuehrer first spoke for 20 minutes. Naturally he preferred to see Scandinavia remain neutral but he could not stand that England, for instance, came to Narvik [northern Norwegian port]. Thereafter he perused Mr. Quisling's memorandum: Necessity of great German league; illegal state in Norway after Jan. 10, 1940, with country handed over to Marxians and Jewish Democrats [the 1939 elections were canceled]; salvation of Norway would be decisive for Germany in her final fight against England.

"On the 17th der fuehrer summoned the gentleman once more. He emphasized that it was his [his underlined] wish that Norway should continue neutral. He then asked: Mr. Quisling, when you request help from me do you know that England is going to declare war against you?

Asked Hitler About Help

"Mr. Q.: Yes, I know that, and I am calculating on Norwegian trade being down for a time.

"At the close of the conversation Mr. Q. asked: Mr. Chancellor, have I understood you correctly that you will help us? Der fuehrer: Yes, so I will.

"Dec. 20—Mr. Q. was just here to say goodbye. He thanked me heartily because we at once had comprehended the whole plan. We shook hands and shall probably not see each other again before the action has succeeded, and the name of Norway's minister general is Quisling."

The original plan, according to evidence presented by the prosecution was that Quisling would seize the government before the German invasion, as actually happened. Reasons for the change are explained in the diary—failure of Quisling to get support at home against the anglophiles and aggression acts by the British. The dairy entries read:

"Feb. 19—Despite Norwegian neutrality declarations to German authorities the present government is preparing for war on the side of England. On Saturday came the report of a British attack on Altmark, a perfectly stupid action on the part of Mr. Churchill. It confirms Mr. Quisling's warnings.

"Today I called on der fuehrer and discussed the problem with him. The Norwegians must in any case be at our disposal if we are compelled to protect ourselves against the English attempt to cut off our connections with Norway.

"March 3—On Feb. 29 I was summoned by der fuehrer. He emphasized as before that he desired the neutrality of Norway and Sweden but it was obvious that the time had come for action as the result of British acts.

"April 9—Today is a great day in the history of Norway. Denmark and Norway are occupied. I congratulated der fuehrer on his work, which also was prepared by me. His whole face was a broad grin. Now Mr. Quisling may form his government."

INTERNED 5 YRS., 1,300 JEWS GET TO PALESTINE

HAIFA, Palestine, Aug. 26 (AP)—A group of 1,300 Jewish refugees, who were aboard the steamer Patria when it exploded mysteriously in Haifa harbor in 1940, finally landed here today after almost five years of internment on the British island of Mauritius in the Indian ocean.

Fleeing from nazi persecution in central European countries, they were refused permission to land in Palestine. The explosion occurred Nov. 25, 1940, while the refugees were awaiting transportation to Mauritius, 530 miles east of Madagascar. There were at least 55 known deaths and 190 missing.

On Mauritius a number of the refugees enlisted in the British pioneer corps.

RETAIN PACIFIC ISLAND BASES, LEGION DEMANDS

State Veterans Oppose Sharing Rule

Strategic Pacific island bases are vital to security, the state American Legion held yesterday by resolution. It went on record as being "unalterably opposed to ever allowing these islands to pass from the control of the United States."

The veterans' organization, meeting in the Hotel Sherman, named in the resolution the Marshalls, Carolines, Marianas, Bonins, Volcano islands, and "other strategic bases." The measure pointed out the islands had been won at the cost of many American lives, and resolved that control should not be shared with any other country.

"Hi Pete" to Governor

Restricted to members of the executive committee, 25 district commanders, and a sprinkling of Legion regulars by travel regulations, the meeting greeted Governor Green with a "Hi Pete," and heard him assert the goal of the Illinois veterans commission is to help out every World War II. service man on a basis of self-sufficiency. Then the members commended by resolution the governor and assembly for creating the governor's committee to aid veterans of World War II.

Foreign born residents who avoided military service should be deported, the Legion voted, and added that immigration should be barred until foreign labor battalions, refugees, war prisoners and those given temporary sanctuary are returned to the land of their origin.

Urges Freedom of News

To assure an enduring peace, another measure held, specific commitments should be included in peace treaties to guarantee the free and unhampered flow of news and information between nations. The Legion condemned the practice of any government usurping the press as an instrument of government.

Opposition to the Wagner-Murray-Dingle bill was voted on the ground that it "disregards civil service laws in the selection of employes, and forces into civil service millions of persons now adequately protected by private insurance and investments."

This resolution held the bill "is based upon the collection of funds in the industrial states and their expenditure in part in nonindustrial states on what in the past has been a planned economy of a purely political nature."

Oppose Code Changes Now

The state leaders put the Legion on record as opposed to any change in funadmental state laws until the armed forces have returned to the state. They congratulated by resolution THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and its published, Col. Robert R. McCormick, for support given the department of Illinois.

'ISOLATIONISM IN U. S. DEAD,' SAYS CONGRESSMAN

THE HAGUE, Holland, Aug. 26 (AP)—Rep. Johnson [D., Tex.] told a meeting here today that, "isolationism in the United States is dead —we realize that prosperity and peace go hand in hand and that we cannot be isolated from the rest of the world."

Johnson is serving as chairman of a subcommittee of the house foreign affairs committee, now traveling in western Europe. Other members of the committee are Reps. Peifer [D., N. Y.], Jarman [D., Ala.], Douglas [D., Ill.], Rogers [R., Mass.], Chiperfield [R., Ill.], Jonkman [R., Mich.] and Gerlach [R., Penn.]

They were entertained by representatives of the United States mission to Holland, the American and British ambassadors to Holland, the Netherlands minister of finance, and other American, British and Dutch authorities. They left for Brussels today, and will visit Germany before returning to the United States at the end of September.

The auxiliary convention will close today.

BRITISH DRIVE TO BOOST WORLD TRADE FORESEEN

LONDON, Aug. 26 (AP)—The Reynolds News predicted today that the "answer to the sudden cessation of lend-lease" would be a quick shifting of war-born British government buying and selling agencies to peace time export and import boards.

Under a blank banner headline of "Lend-Lease Crisis: Government Acts—Giant Import and Export Scheme," the newspaper said: "With lend-lease supplies cut off, Britain will make bulk purchases from all countries willing to supply us with goods, and will organize the selling abroad of British products.

"This will mean an all out campaign to secure goods for export, which in turn will mean cuts in supplies of civilian goods at home. The boards will facilitate trading with Russia and other countries where trading is under state control, and will put an end to speculation at the expense of the consumer."

PRESS FREEDOM REQUIREMENT BY UNRRA IS ASKED

Washington, D. C., Aug. 26 (AP)—Foreign nations not having a free press would be denied UNRRA funds under a proposed advanced today by Rep. Brown [R., O.].

Rep. Brown

Brown, a newspaper publisher, said he will oppose the granting of additional funds to the United Nations relief and rehabilitation administration unless there is some assurance that nations receiving aid coöperate in a world free press movement.

"One sure way to know what the needs of the foreign countries are and how UNRRA is functioning," Brown declared, "is thru free access to news abroad."

Congress is expected to be asked soon to give UNRRA an additional billion dollars to carry on its work in Europe.

DYING OWI SEEKS JOB OF HELPING U. S. DIPLOMATS

Washington, D. C., Aug. 26 (AP)—The office of war information wants to fold up within 90 days and have the state department take over part of its staff as a United States information service abroad.

The 5,000 man agency has so recommended to President Truman, it was learned today. A White House decision is expected soon.

Some state department officers have suggested that units from OWI could be placed under a reorganized and expanded division of public and cultural relations in that department. OWI's outposts, far-flung from London and Beirut to Chungking and Moscow, could be attached to American embassies and legations.

Both state and OWI officials, in discussing post-war possibilities, have insisted that the government would not provide spot news to foreign countries, but would make available "background" information on America and American policies, texts of official documents and the speeches of public officials, and so on.

Stettinius Off for London to Allied Nations Parley

New York, Aug. 26 (AP)—Former State Secretary Stettinius was among 1,228 passengers who sailed today aboard the Queen Mary for Southampton, England. Stettinius is en route to London, where he will be President Truman's representative at an interim commission meeting of the allied nations organization.

FOOD AND FUEL IMPROVEMENT NEAR IN FRANCE

BY ROBERT SAGE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, Aug. 26—This week-end brought Paris the first concrete promise it has had in a year of liberation of better things to come in the way of food, heat, transport, and material comforts. The promise that got the best reception was by Food Minister Christian Pineau, who announced that after five years of bread tickets, bread would go off the ration list at the beginning of October.

To the lower brackets in a great bread eating country like France, such a step means the difference between hunger and full stomachs. There is also a hint that the present meat ration of 125 grams [4½ ounces] weekly will soon be doubled, while the monthly fat ration of 500 grams [17½ ounces], which was boosted to 600 grams this month, may gradually be increased to 750 grams.

The heat outlook, too, is brighter for the first time since 1941. Already each family, according to the number of members, has been allotted 220 to 330 pounds of coal, and it is believed this amount will be doubled before the end of the winter, thus permitting at least two months of heating.

SENATE BARRED JOB TESTIMONY, THOMAS CLAIMS

New York, Aug. 26 [Special]—Norman Thomas, veteran Socialist leader, said in a statement today that Sen. Wagner [D., N. Y.], chairman of the senate banking committee, had refused time to Socialist witnesses wishing to be heard on the so-called full employment bill. Hearings on the measure were conducted before this committee last week, and will be resumed Tuesday.

Thomas asserted full employment could not be achieved "without regimentation and burocracy" and accused the administration and congress of failing to do anything about unemployment and reconversion until they "fell into a panic because of a Socialist victory in Britain and the sudden ending of the war."

Rep. Manasco [D., Ala.], chairman of the house committee on executive expenditures, which will start hearings on the measure soon, in Washington, characterized the bill today as "vague and unrealistic" and said members of his committee can't figure out where the money will come to finance the full employment program, or how the financing will be achieved.

STICKS TO POLICY ON ARGENTINA, SAYS BRADEN

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Aug. 25 (AP)—United States Ambassador Spruille Braden, who was appointed assistant secretary of state in charge of Latin American affairs today, told reporters he would not change his attitude on Argentina-United States relations, and hoped to accomplish more in his new position. Braden issued a statement at the embassy, where he has been confined with a cold since last Sunday. His policy has been to apply pressure on the Argentine government for fulfillment of Mexico City and San Francisco conference obligations, and to appeal directly to the Argentine people for support of democratic policies.

DO-AS-YOU-LIKE WEEKEND WORKS WONDERS ON GIs

Wounded Men Discard Crutches and Dance

BY JUNE GESERICK

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Delavan, Wis., Aug. 26—Miraculous recoveries came this week-end when six wounded soldiers from Vaughan General hospital, Hines, Ill., tested plans to entertain veterans on week-ends in summer homes of Chicagoland residents.

The men are guests of Dr. and Mrs. Melford E. Zinser, who originated the week-end plan for GI convalescents and are working in coöperation with other prominent persons as the "Lest We Forget committee" to enlist additional invitations for wounded men to spend brief vacations where there are facilities for their care and recreation.

They Do as They Please

There were no rules for the week-end. The men were housed in guest quarters so they would have additional freedom. None of them did anything except by preference.

It was late last night when the men decided they wanted to go to a night club, but the do-as-you-like plan still was operating. A limousine was driven out of the garage for their use and the soldiers were enjoying the bright lights and music of a resort cafe this morning when the first miracle happened.

Pvt. George E. Eckstein, 20, of Batesville, Ind., who wears a Purple Heart and cluster and a pair of crutches for wounds suffered Nov. 20 and Dec. 20, 1944, on Leyte, looked wistfully at the dancers. His good foot tapped in time to the music. Then he turned to a pretty girl.

He Finds the Words

"Will you dance?" he asked. The other wounded men at his table looked on in amazement.

George tossed his crutches to one side and guided his partner, first slowly and then more surely, about the dance floor.

"It's just what the doctor ordered," he remarked as he returned to the table, and he kicked his crutches from sight.

Not to be outdone by George, Pvt. Erno Fodi, 25, of Detroit, Mich., danced two dances. He had danced last two years ago, before he was wounded in the arms, legs, and stomach last October in Italy.

Erno's buddies clapped him on the back when the music ended, for they remembered the trouble army doctors had getting Erno to walk even after his two broken legs had healed.

The third miracle happened to Pvt. Kenneth M. Lewan, 20, of 4149 N. Claremont av., Chicago, when he hurried to greet Mrs. Elmer Stevens, whose husband is a former president of the State street council and a member of the "Lest We Forget committee," arrived at the Zinser pier to invite the soldiers for a speed boat ride.

An Escape from Death

Kenneth, who is 6 feet 3 inches tall, narrowly escaped death when he was wounded Nov. 30, 1944, for the second time in Germany.

He wears a brace on the right leg and uses a cane to help him walk, but Kenneth forgot about the cane when he saw Mrs. Stevens' speedboat draw up to the pier. Down the stairs of the Zinser home he hurried, across the lawn, and down the rock garden stairs to the pier. It was the first time he had gone down steps without support of the stick.

Pvt. John T. Matsudaria, 22, of Seattle, Wash., who still suffers from abdominal wounds received while fighting in Italy, ate more this week-end than any time since he was injured.

Corp. John L. Keller, 23, of Corydon, Ind., and Pvt. Clyde E. Orman, 34, of Ottumwa, Ia., were sun tanned and happy from the days at the lake side.

All six of the men voted the experimental week-end a success.

The Inquiring Camera Girl

BY MARYON ZYLSTRA

[The Tribune will pay $5 for each interesting question submitted by a reader and used by The Tribune. Today's question was submitted by Peggy C. Boehm, Caledonia, Minn.]

THE QUESTION

"Filler 'er up"—Where did you go with that first unrationed tankful?

WHERE ASKED

THE ANSWERS

Paul Axelrod, president, Superior Paper Box company, 830 Lawrence av.—During the long siege of gas rationing I always took the train whenever I went on a business trip. But it was nice to fill up the tank and drive to Kalamazoo, Mich. I had the convenience of a car to take care of my business and pleasure—just as it used to be.

J. J. Sterling, manufacturer, Springfield, O.—I drove my car, my wife accompanying me, to Chicago on a combined pleasure and business trip. I was never bothered by the gas rationing, but I didn't have enough gas to take long trips like this. My wife is enjoying herself and catching up on her shopping in Chicago.

Ray Solem, photographer, 1425 N. Austin blvd.—The main purpose I've put this extra gas to is driving to work instead of taking the "L." Other than using my car for necessary trips I haven't taken much advantage of the end of rationing. However, I plan to go on a fishing trip around the first of October.

Lt. Vernon van Heyninger, 7309 S. Union av.—My brother and I used to go to school in Grand Rapids, Mich., so we filled up the tank and drove back to our old stamping grounds. The tires were pretty bad and we had one flat, but we got it fixed without too much effort. Lots of people were having the same trouble.

Bill Bell, hospital apprentice 2d class, 3213 Diversey av. — This gas came just in time for my leave. I went to the gas station, put in a lot of gas, and picked up some friends of mine. We drove out to the golf course, which was about six miles. That used to be a long haul on the street car. Of course I went joy riding, too.

Cleaning Solvents Curb Will Be Lifted Friday

Washington, D. C., Aug. 26 (AP)—Laundries and dry cleaners will have unrestricted use of cleaning solvents again after Friday. The office of civilian requirements announced today that all controls will be lifted then on carbon tetrachloride, trichlorethylene, and perchlorothylene. The establishments were restricted to approximately 20 per cent of their normal requirements during the war.

THE SECOND OPENING OF JAPAN

Gen. MacArthur and his occupation forces go to Japan to complete a job begun by Commodore Matthew Calbraith Perry 92 years ago. Perry is credited with opening up Japan to the world. In reality, the effect of his accomplishment was the reverse. He opened up the world to Japan. The busy subjects of the emperor went out and absorbed all that the western world had to offer them. Then they returned to Japan, hermetically sealed their country, as they thought, from the prying eyes of the occidentals, and prepared to employ their new, borrowed knowledge to achieve the subjugation of their teachers.

Gen. MacArthur's task is to open up Japan to liberal, western ideas; to destroy the feudal social organization which has persisted into the 20th century, and to reform several fundamental attitudes of thought which have bound the ordinary Japanese in blind obedience to the will of the samurai, or warrior caste. The principal objective of the occupation should be to eliminate the militarists and to ventilate the mind of Yamada-san, Japan's Mr. Smith.

The passions of war may have obscured the fact that the Japanese have good qualities—courtesy, simplicity, loyalty to a friendship, love of home and family, and artistic sensitivity. These traits in the common Japanese have been lost in the fury of war. We have been able to see only the hated enemy. But the good qualities of the vast body of simple Japanese citizens, which have in the past attracted such discerning Americans as Lafcadio Hearn, have not been permanently suppressed. They are malleable material upon which Gen. MacArthur and the occupation administration can work with good effect.

The first thing is to get the Japanese militarists off Yamada-san's back. The second is, not to re-educate him under compulsion, which won't change his outlook, but to let him re-educate himself. That should be simpler than it sounds. For years the ordinary Japanese citizen has been told nothing except what the saber rattlers would permit him to know. Radio loud speakers have brought him the monoform expression of the jingoists' will. Religion has commanded his unquestioning obedience to the state, to the dangerous doctrine of racial superiority, and a heaven-sent mission of conquest. In the schoolroom as a child he is taught the precept of Jimmu, the supposed founder of the empire 2,600 years ago: "We shall build our capital all over the world and make the whole world our dominion." No right of dissent is ever permitted him. The "thought police" would even arrest him because of what might be going on inside his head.

His newspapers encourage him to believe in all this nonsense and disabuse him of none of it. In the army he is taught to revere his commander like a father. If he is awkward in drill the "father" may brutally smash his face and knock him to the ground. He arises and humbly bows. Even working in the great factories, he is bound to his employer as the ancient warrior was bound to the lord to whom he owed fealty. He works longer hours without complaint, and will even commit hara-kiri if he fails to carry out an assignment.

The three governing rules of his life have been Shinto, the way of the gods; Kodo, the way of the emperor, and Bushido, the way of the warrior. All have been neatly combined to deliver the common man in Japan into the power of the military, which for years has had the emperor under its thumb. All have been nurtured and employed to arouse the deep emotional responses which have made the Japanese soldier an obstinate and fanatical warrior.

The Japanese sees only the myth. He does not see that it is artificial, that it was revived only within the last 70 years, and that it has been cunningly contrived as a smoke screen for militarism and wars of subjugation, in which he, the common man, has gone to his death for no better reason than to visit ruin and the calamity of a stupendous defeat upon himself and his country.

The Japanese common man must be impressed with the enormity of the failure into which he has been led by the insanely ambitious military clique. He must be brought to recognize that this is their failure, not his own. He must be made to understand that it is they who have doped and stupefied him with propaganda, even using religion as an instrument of that purpose. He must be convinced that it is the jingoists, and not himself, who have lost face.

The Japanese people have been pledged free elections to determine their future course. There is hope for them, and hope for us, in the prospect. Once enlightened, once guided toward the liberation of the spirit, political freedom, and mental illumination, they may be able to save themselves and to rid themselves of the disproportionate ambitions upon which the warrior class played in leading them to their downfall.

The possibility is far from hopeless. As late as 1937 the army could get only 50 seats in the diet, as against 466 liberal seats. Political assassination and the intimidation of thought and action were the weapons of the army in getting their way despite the fact that the people consistently voted them down. The army couldn't lose, for the autonomy of the supreme war council, responsible to no one but the emperor, who was himself a puppet, enabled it to proceed independently of parliamentary check, even to the point of involving the nation in war in China in 1937 against popular and governmental opposition.

It will be Gen. MacArthur's task to see that those of the military clique who have not already resorted to the ceremonial knife are rendered harmless both to ourselves and their countrymen. With them must be dispelled the myth of Japan's natural right to ascendancy over the world. The myth of the 47 ronin [men without a master] who did not rest until they had avenged the death of their lord by murdering his enemy, after which they committed hara-kiri, must not be permitted a modern revival under American occupation.

"BROTHERS IN ARMS"

The great heart of Joe Curran, boss of the CIO National Maritime union, which does little to discourage the notion that its mission is to advance the communist revolution, is bleeding again. The shooting has stopped on the high seas, but Mr. Curran has informed the government with, he would have it known, the utmost regret that if seamen's war risk bonuses are eliminated he may not be able to answer for his followers. They might [sob] strike.

"We don't want our brothers in the armed services to find themselves stranded because ships are not properly manned and then to blame the seamen," Mr. Curran cried piteously.

Overlooking the question of what possible brotherhood exists between the men who have fought America's battles and Mr. Curran and his commie cronies, it might be suggested that the government has a method of dealing with the maritime union should the CIO seamen attempt to enforce their bonus demand by refusing to bring home veterans from Europe and the Pacific. Selective service still is in business. All it has to do is draft the membership of the maritime union—and not at any inflated war time wage, either. That way it will be certain that the boys will be brought home.

GET THE AIRPORT NOW

Announcement by Pan American World Airways that flights originating in Chicago to Europe and the orient await only negotiation by the state department of route and landing agreements with interested foreign countries emphasizes the imperative necessity of acquiring Douglas airport at once as a new Chicago terminal. Ben Regan, chairman of the state aeronautics commission, asserts that there is no reason why the city should not obtain possession of the field today. He is entirely correct.

The consequences of delay, as Mr. Regan observes, are to get Chicago's future in aviation snarled up in red tape. We will be unprepared and lagging behind other cities when the transocean air lines come knocking at the door. Mayor Kelly has appointed a committee to consider sites for expanded terminal facilities. The members need go no farther than Douglas airport to solve their problems.

A SON OF THE MIDDLE WEST

Gen. Charles G. Dawes today observes his 80th birthday. All of Chicago will wish him continued health and happiness. Gen. Dawes is one of those rare men whose diversified gifts and achievements suggest the many-faceted character of a Da Vinci. Lawyer, banker, diplomat, statesman, soldier, he was a success at every undertaking, yet he managed to be one of the great individualists of our day.

Even before the first World war Gen. Dawes had proved his foresight and resourcefulness in the service of his country. During the pursuit of Villa and his bandits into Mexico after their border raid on Columbus, N. M., two troops of the 10th Negro cavalry were attacked at the town of Carrizal on June 21, 1916, by 400 of Carranza's Mexican government troops equipped with machine guns. Of the 84 Americans, two officers, Capt. Charles T. Boyd and Lieut. Henry R. Adair, and seven enlisted men were killed; one officer and nine enlisted men were wounded, and 23 men and a civilian interpreter were captured.

The incident demonstrated to Gen. Dawes the need of equipping our troops with modern automatic weapons. When the 1st Illinois cavalry was ordered to the border no machine guns were provided. Gen. Dawes raised the money to purchase them from a manufacturer making them for the British army. Tom Cochran, then of THE TRIBUNE, now of the New York News, was the captain of the first machine gun troop in the American army, equipped thru the patriotic efforts of Gen. Dawes.

In the first World war Gen. Dawes performed distinguished service for his country as general purchasing agent of the A. E. F. and as a member of the military board of allied supply. His work in creating the Dawes plan for German finance was considered at the time so constructive a contribution to world stability that in 1925 he was chosen to share the Nobel peace prize. Later he held the second highest office within the gift of the American people.

Upon leaving the Vice Presidency, Gen. Dawes went to the Court of St. James's as American ambassador, and he was, to say the least, a refreshing change from some Americans who, in holding the post, had become more English than the English. Until he arrived in London, the English had made a habit of dominating all international gatherings by imposing English customs on them. They had not reckoned, however, with this son of the middle border.

In England course meals were the same everywhere, ending with demi-tasse, and smoking did not begin until after the king's health had been toasted at the end of the meal. Dawes broke this all down by smoking his famous underslung pipe with his soup and taking his coffee with the only other course he would eat. He also had the convenient facility of refusing to remember the titles of the British present. He completely dominated all of the official meetings he attended—a distinction unique among American diplomats.

THE BLACK FLAG

Required use of the black flag by surrendering submarines interests this column as an unexplained novelty of the greatest war's last gasps. It flies in the face of the ancient tradition of the white flag as a symbol of peaceful intention and acceptance of defeat. How come, we ask, and having no direct communication with the bureau of military heraldry in Washington, which has thought up some fancy stuff during these last four years, we will make a guess.

The black flag, emblem of piracy, is more visible on a low-slung craft such as a surfaced submarine than the white flag. Under most weather conditions there will be less chance of suspecting that the surrendering boat has hostile intentions if she is flying the Jolly Roger, without skull and crossbones. On the other hand, sea and sky could easily conspire to make a white flag look like a flutter of drying laundry on the deck of an enemy still in shooting mood.

The sinister suggestion of the black flag seems to have come into nautical history from the orient. First use of the grim emblem, apparently, was by Mohammed, who is said to have borrowed a black curtain from the doorway of his favorite wife's tent for a battle emblem. It was adopted as a banner by the caliphs of Bagdad, called the Abbasides, while the other two branches of Moslems, the Fatimites and the Ommiades, waved flags that were, respectively, green and white. The Mohammedan corsairs of the Mediterranean, who made life miserable for Christian sailors, may have often used black flags.

In modern times, European shipping in the China sea was considerably pestered by native pirates, who were called the Black Flags.

IN TRIBUNE SQUARE

[Aug. 14, 6 P. M.]

We stood in silence as the great news came
Nor seemed to comprehend the fateful word:
A world new born, and yet life flowed the same
As in the endless time of hope deferred.
Tears came unbidden and our heads were bowed—
No more than this, to mark the day of days,
Until our anthem sounded, and the crowd
Followed with quiet lips each hallowed phrase.
Not then the tumult that the triumph bred
For slim and proud the bronze of Nathan Hale
Spoke of our other sons, the legioned dead,
Who knew his words, and since they did not fail,
Restored to us the future long since lost
If they had stayed their hand to count the cost.

The Alsatian Grapevine

[Memoirs of a Yank in Alsace.]

Monsieur was an inveterate news-hound, and we found that he liked nothing better than to receive a copy of The Stars and Stripes. Halfway thru the news, he invariably got out a battered Michelin road guide and pointed out the towns that were in the day's news, commenting on the probable strategy to come.

What surprised us, however, was that frequently M. Ehrmann knew more about what was going on than we did, and that he was sometimes ahead of The Stars and Stripes by a day or two, due to that strange, intangible agency which we came to know as "the Alsatian Grapevine." Perhaps it was a holdover from the days of the occupation, not long past, when verboten news filtered from town to town and citizen to citizen under the noses of the Germans. Whatever it was, we found that the Grapevine was fast, remarkably accurate, and a little bit spooky. There is a story going around about a general who spied an Alsatian walking by and asked him what he was doing in a battle zone, only to be told that the battle was over. Checking up, the general discovered it was indeed over, and had been for about half an hour.

Then there was the time we went downstairs for our nightly session and were greeted somewhat sadly by Madame. "We heard you were going to move," she said. Move? Who, us? We laughed at the suggestion and asked where she'd got such an idea. "I just heard it," she shrugged. "I hope it isn't true. We'll be sorry to see you go."

We moved that night. Pvt. Cholly

TO A HUMMINGBIRD

You cannot see into the deeps
Of that bright flower-chalice there,
Yet you seem certain that it keeps
Some waiting sweet for you to share.

Unerringly you swoop and dart,
Then still wings that, in flight, are swift,
To take the sweetness in the heart
Of cups the trumpet flowers lift.

And not less vulnerable than
The human heart are tiny wings . . .
It would be well if wistful man
Took, with your faith, the cup love brings!

Friend of the Yanks

[The Friend of the Yanks will answer questions of service men, veterans, and their dependents by mail if stamped envelope is sent to 435 N. Michigan av. The Tribune's veterans' bureau, 1 S. Dearborn st., Superior 0200, gives personal interviews.]

M. C. asks: "Will you please explain in your column the navy point system for discharge? Does the half point for each month of active duty include all time in service or only time overseas or on sea duty?"

The navy gives one-half point for each year of age to the nearest birthday, one-half point for each month of active service, no matter where served, and 10 points for a dependent, determined by whether dependent was receiving family allowance. Only 10 points may be counted for dependents, no matter how many a man has. Navy personnel who have won the congressional medal of honor, navy cross, distinguished service medal, legion of merit, silver star or distinguished flying cross also may request discharge.

G. E. asks: "Is a veteran who was discharged from service because of the dependency of his parents entitled to education under the GI bill? Can he obtain subsistence allowance?"

Yes. The fact that the man was discharged for dependency is immaterial. All other conditions, such as at least 90 days of service, must be met and subsistence allowance of $75 a month can be obtained.

Mrs. T. F. asks: "Can the wife of a veteran get hospital and medical care from the government?"

No. Admittance to veterans' hospitals is granted only to those who served in the military forces.

THE MECHANICS OF ELIMINATION

AFTER a meal has undergone the various essential changes in the mouth, stomach, and intestines, the next step in the process is elimination. As a rule this takes place 30 to 40 hours from the time it is eaten. What is the mechanism of this performance?

The rectum, approximately 6 inches long is a continuation of the large intestine. It leads to the anal canal, which is about 1 inch in length; and this organ communicates with the outside thru an oval aperture, the anus. Encircling the outlet are the external and internal sphincters, which have a valvelike action.

The wall of the rectum, like the entire alimentary tract, consists of four coats, each containing a different type of tissue. At the lower end of what is known as the "submucous layer" we find a network of blood vessels which unite to form the internal hemorrhoidal veins. These are differentiated from the external type, which arise near the opening of the anal canal.

The function of the rectum is to pass on the fecal mass formed in the colon. This material is lubricated with mucus secreted by the glands in the lining. Normally, the structure is empty. Two or three times in each 24 hours, [usually after eating], reflex action will attempt to force the contents of the large bowel forward. If the call is observed and heeded, defecation takes place. This procedure involves a strong contraction of the rectal wall and the abdominal muscles, as well as a relaxation of the anal sphincters.

Difficulties in this area may give rise to constitutional symptoms such as headache, neuralgia, generalized muscular pain, insomnia, or skin eruptions. As a rule, however, it is the presence of local manifestations which encourages the victim to seek the advice of a physician. The main offenders are pain, bleeding, and itching. Examination may reveal abscess, fissure, fistula, or external hemorrhoids [when complicated by clotting] as the cause of pain.

The most common conditions which bring on bleeding are ulcers, hemorrhoids, polyps, and tumors. Itching [pruritus ani] may follow any alteration in the anal tissue due to irritation of the nerve endings by infection, injury, parasitic invasion, or skin disorders. Indirect origins include allergy or habit and occasionally the symptom is on a psychic basis.

Because of the absence of nerves of sensation in the lining of the rectum, a serious condition may develop without the patient's knowledge. It is for this reason that a rectal examination should be included in every periodic physical checkup. Suspicious findings may demand a more careful study, preferably by one trained in this field. Various instruments have been devised to aid in diagnosis and many lives have been spared because malignancy in this region was detected in time.

In this series, we have tried to show how efficiently the digestive system operates. But it is no stronger than its weakest link and, for this reason, we should spare it from overwork and irritation.

SCIATIC NERVE

A. P. writes: What causes sciatica?

REPLY

The source of the trouble can be found at the origin of this nerve—namely, in the lower back. Strain and arthritis are the chief culprits responsible for pressure or irritation. The fibers are also subject to infection, injury, and vitamin deficiencies.

Aftermath at Sea

[Lines from a naval officer in the Pacific:]

"It has been difficult to write letters this last week. We have been awake as many as 22 hours a day waiting for the news to be definite. When it came, after seesawing for hours and days, the letdown was sharp. There was little if any celebrating. A sober quiet fell over the men, for with victory came the dejection that followed the realization that it would be months before we would return home, maybe a year or two for some of us.

"Bitterness set in when the navy point system was released. There was a brief flurry of fourth grade arithmetic, and men went around comparing scores. The smile that accompanied the necessary 44 or 49 was rare. There were those who spit out acrid words, 'Damn the brass hats; they're giving the chair-warmers in the United States the breaks.' No points for overseas or combat duty. No consideration for men with children. The youngster who had taken on a wife in a hurried rush of love was on equal footing with the older men with several children who had left his family and his job to take his share of the burden.

"An apathy and dissipation of spirit has followed. You see more men sitting or lying on their cots staring at something 6,000 miles away. Others are angry and talk of writing to their congressmen, stirring up the people back home. I have heard talk of 'forgotten men' during the depression. I hear it again now.

"I hope we are not stirring the bitterness at the bottom of the cup in a generation which has known too much of frustration, emptiness, and dead ends. We are the guys who were born about the time of the last war, soaked up the post-war cynicism and futility of the '20s, and then the crushing denial of the '30s. And now this new frustration of our hopes. That's what you hear.

"In the bitter talk you hear men tell of the waste of federal funds and unneeded buildings, fancy guest houses, comfortable officers' clubs. You hear that the brass hats want to perpetuate their war-gained high ranks, that they will release their grasp on subordinates only when they are clubbed by an irate and money-wise congress reawakened to its senses. They say it's time for congress to shut the purse.

"'We're going to pay for all this expense in taxes when we get back,' one says. 'We'll come home and have to compete with war workers who have been coining dough while we have denied our families the comforts of life, have sold our furniture, and broken up our homes. We'll come back to unemployment and low wage scales and have to pay out a chunk of our wages to the government. We won't even have any savings to fall back on.'

"There seems to be a general lassitude toward lopping off immediately unnecessary functions. The directives talk about military necessity and military convenience, but each commanding officer can define them differently and merge convenience with necessity until you cannot tell where one stops and the other begins.

"In all this I am trying laboriously to reflect the mental attitude that is growing. I don't know whether you are interested, but somehow I feel that it is important, one of the most important things in our life."

Another Viewpoint

And from another navy man, at sea 18 months:

"When I first heard the news of the peace offers, I started shaking all over. I was stunned. Naturally I am happy, not just for myself, but for all the fellows who are out here and those who won't have to come out here now. . . . The big question on every one's lips now is when do we go home. For some it may be soon; for others, a long time and a lot of hard work. There is a tremendous job to be done out here yet. Strange as it may seem, a lot of us seem to think it will be a little rugged going back to civilization, and it scares us to think about it. To give you an idea, one of our boys went ashore on recreation today. He said he had an opportunity to talk to a Red Cross girl, but was shaking so he couldn't say a word."

BLIND ALLEY TO TYRANNY

Coalport, Pa., Aug. 22—State socialism will be provided a powerful apparatus for its accomplishment by the so-called "full employment" law now offered to congress. It provides that federal funds are to be used for employing those whom private funds do not employ. Many will not be employed for the reason that federal taxes will take from employers the capital needed to provide private employment. This circumstance, taken in consideration with the fact that the federal government thru the Reconstruction Finance corporation and the War Plants corporation already has liens running as high as 80 per cent of the capitalization of industries and railroads, points clearly toward outright state socialism.

The extent to which the present federal debt must act as a deterrent to private employment is not generally realized, but it is certainly a fact that interest on and amortization of this debt, together with the increase necessary to operate an inflated federal government, will drain off the funds needed for further investment to create private employment. Allowing for the increase in taxes required for principal, interest, and amortization, and adding to it the expense of political boondoggling of this "full employment" law, less and less money will be available for private employment, which will gradually decrease until boondoggling remains as the sole source of employment. State socialism then will be necessarily the result.

Here in Clearfield county, the share of the present federal debt assignable to the county amounts in dollars to 15 times the assessed valuation of all the property of the county. But the basis of the assessed valuation is one-third of the actual value, so that the federal debt for us is five mes the value of all we own. How, on this basis, is it possible to run the industries—mining and refractories, a little lumbering and considerable agriculture? The pro rata of the federal debt to value of property with us is very likely typical of the pro rata all over the United States, and the taxation it denotes forms too great a part of the value of all capital to make private effort feasible after the drain of federal taxation is sustained.

If state socialism would work, all this might be less ominous than it is. But it does not work, and renders governments insolvent and their people paupers. The governments of Europe are to a very large extent socialist states: they are insolvent, depending on the American people to supply them with credit, food, and machinery, and to finance our participation in their wars, which are born of pauperism, conflicting theories as to how state socialism may best be made to succeed, and of the perpetual suspicions and covetousness between conflicting socialistic states.

Having started down this road to ruin under the Rooseveltian New Deal, it is hardly likely we will turn back. Nevertheless, to pursue the course is to make an end of private property and freedom in the United States. State socialism and private property cannot long exist side by side, but private property must disappear and state socialism occupy the role it vacates. It happens, tho, that private property is another name for freedom, because those who do not have property are dependent upon those who have it. Under the state socialism which is to follow the enactment of the "full employment" law the people will be dependent upon the government because it will finally own all property, and they will be subservient to the burocrats who administer state socialism.

Chicago, Aug. 21—The older THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE gets the better it seems to be. No wonder it has grown to over a million again. May it grow to two million.

I just don't feel happy until I read it, and I read it thru. Your editorials are, to say the least, American, and that to me is the best.

What inspired this was your editorial, "America Feels Its Own Power." In fact, your four editorials on that page are excellent—all exceedingly American. While you have always advocated and fought for the outright possession of islands in the Pacific as an American policy, your closing paragraphs show your real Americanism.

"This nation," you say, "is witnessing a rapid eclipse of its little Americans, its ashamed Americans, its hyphenated Americans, and all the obeisant, lickspittle crew." Does any one dare dispute your Americanism? Yes, we are the strongest power in the world, altho generally we do not realize it out of our decency of heart, but would that our congress and our President will use it in our God-given way to think a little of ourselves and our own.

ROBERT P. COOKE

GEN. GRANT'S APPEAL

Chicago, Aug. 14—Why not proclaim a slogan to which all peoples, all nations, all individuals of good will can subscribe? It consists of only four words. It was our own Gen. Ulysses S. Grant who gave it to this nation. Let us now share it with all the nations of the earth: "Let us have peace."

LOUIS J. KELLER

THE LAND NAVY FAVORS ITSELF

Chicago, Aug. 21—The navy system of points for releasing men has obviously been set up by the dry land sailors in Washington. This enables the men who have sat out the war on their swivel chairs to get out as quickly as those who have been battling overseas for several years.

INELIGIBLE

Chicago, Aug. 14—I live in Chicago and should like to appoint my brother administrator of my will. His residence is in Iowa. Will he be able to serve in that capacity? M. H.

He would not be eligible, since he is not an Illinois resident.

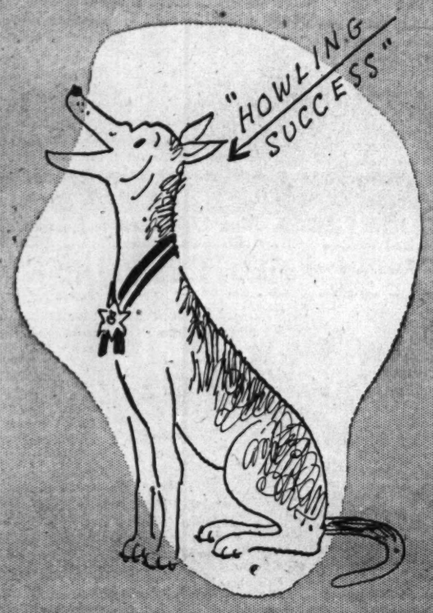
Dear public...



"I want a veteran's service pin," she said, "for a hero who has been a howling success."

"Why certainly," said we, "do you have his discharge papers?"

She did—for two years service in Africa and Italy and "Valor under fire." "Now," she said: "Would you like to meet the hero?—"Here he is—my dog, Micky."

CONGRESS READY TO CRACK DOWN ON ARMY'S SIZE

Committee Also to Act on War's Legal Duration

must return the country to the people," Shafer declared. "Now that the emergency is over they must relinquish the power they have exercised.

"It is outrageous that men who have served in the army for two years, most of them with months of service abroad, should be sent overseas again. Few at home can realize what these men went thru. I saw two weeks of it during a committee visit to Europe and that was too much for me.

"These men have earned the right to stay home. I shall battle to the end for their right to go home at once."

Five Million in Two Years

At the war department it was reported that approximately 5 million men have had two years or more of service. Discharge of these would permit the retention of 2,600,000 men for regular duty, it was said.

Shafer declared the drafting of youths 18 and 19 was approved by congress as an emergency measure. Now that the war is ended, the emergency is over and the youths should be permitted to go to college or take their place in the community, he said.

Other committee members expressed themselves as favoring the end of the draft. It was felt that adequate army needs can be supplied by volunteers. Members in general agreed that the army estimate of 2,600,000 men for peace time is too high.

It has been announced 400,000 men will be retained to occupy the American held section of Germany. The number of men needed for Japan is to be fixed by Gen. MacArthur. While the general has given no indication of his needs, it is generally expected he will not ask for more than 500,000 men for the entire Pacific.

This would leave 1,700,000 men for the garrisoning of such outposts as Panama, Alaska, Puerto Rico, and Hawaii and of the United States, if the army program should be approved.

Congressmen returning for the committee deliberations found their desks piled high with letters from soldiers and their families asking for speedy return home from overseas and from camps here. Heaviest demands came from older men and those who have had overseas service. All held the army point system should be revised to permit discharge of men with 50 or fewer points. At the war department it was unofficially reported that cutting the present 85 point discharge level to as low as 60 points would not release 5 million men within the year, which is the present army goal.

Policy on Actors Hit

Committee members also have received complaints charging that motion picture actors, radio performers, and athletes are being discriminated against in the army's release policy. Personnel from these civilian callings, it is said, cannot get their release as easily as other service men, altho they may be equally entitled to it. According to the complaints, this is because of a special war department directive issued in an effort to guard against criticism of the army because of the publicity attached to men who were prominent figures in the entertainment and sporting world.

Returning members of congress voiced a disposition to end emergency powers of the executive as rapidly as possible. They were generally agreed that the duration of the war should be officially proclaimed as rapidly as possible because various war service and powers are set for six months after duration. The end of hostilities does not mean the duration of the war, because the official ending could be delayed months or years while the executive branch of the government exercises various emergency powers.

ARMY WILL FLY 252 RETURNEES TO COAST DAILY

New York, Aug. 26 (AP)—The army service forces said today that 12 planes would leave the Newark, N. J., airport tomorrow for the west coast with 252 soldiers, beginning the army's project thru which combat troops arriving at the New York port of embarkation will be flown west by commercial air lines.

The army transportation corps and the air transport command developed the project to relieve the burden of troop movement on railway facilities.

The westbound schedule of 12 flights daily will be increased soon to 28 planes a day carrying a total of 588 soldiers. Planes will be 21 passenger C-47s. Flights will take about 19 hours.

THIS DAY IN HISTORY

Aug. 27—Battle of Long Island

In the early morning blackness of Aug. 27, 1776, the crackle of musketry broke the silence of the open fields southeast of the hamlet of Brooklyn, N. Y. British and Hessian soldiers were skirmishing with outlying detachments of Americans whose assignment was to prevent enemy movement toward the East river, near which Gen. Putnam's camp and fortifications were located.

The defenders fought well, and inflicted serious losses on the enemy, but before long the sickening realization came to them that they had been duped. The enemy's frontal attacks were feints.

A much larger force, led by the British top commander, Howe, had turned the American left flank and had come in between the outposts and their camp. Large numbers of the defenders were captured, others—after a vain fight—managed to elude the enemy and make their way back to the American fortifications thru supposedly impassable swamps.

Washington now arrived on the scene. He had had reinforcements sent from New York City, but with the British in control of all the outlying districts where it had been planned to make a stand, there was nothing to do but hole up in the fortifications and prepare to withstand an assault.

Whether because of the British commander's caution or because of his concern for his exhausted men, the assault never came. Instead, Howe made preparations for a siege. Washington, knowing the enemy's overwhelming strength, extricated his army by a skillful night ferrying operation over the East river.

Thus the battle of Long Island, while an American defeat, was not at all the type of defeat which the British had hoped to inflict.

BRITISH GIRLS HYSTERICAL AS NEGROES LEAVE

LONDON, Aug. 26 (AP)—The Sunday Pictorial in a front page story today reported a "hysterical" demonstration by British girls over the departure of American Negro soldiers from Bristol. A Bristol police information official said "An incident occurred when a number of young women crowded the railroad station to say goodbye to their friends."

Army public relations in London said the "matter was purely social, and was not reported to us." The Pictorial story said a mob of screaming girls between 17 and 25, who had heard that four companies of American Negro soldiers were leaving for home, yesterday besieged the barracks where the soldiers were and began singing "Don't Fence Me In." "This was too much for the colored men, who began to break down the barbed wire surrounding their quarters," the story said. "In a few minutes hundreds of girls and United States soldiers were kissing and embracing."

The story related that the girls sobbed as trucks took the soldiers to the station, and police attempted to persuade the girls to go home.

REVEAL SECRET WEAPONS NAZIS HAD ON V-E DAY

Allies Find How They Made Butter from Coal

BY WILLIAM STRAND
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 26—German scientists, who apparently believe anything is possible, were preparing plenty of grim surprises for the allies when the war ended and left them almost nothing to show for their work except details of amazing secret weapons to explain to allied investigators.

Their work ranged from "significant progress" in the development of an atomic bomb, the office of war information disclosed today, to designs for rocket missiles which they hoped would cross the Atlantic ocean in 17 minutes.

They also had succeeded in making butter from coal and had developed a system of radar camouflage consisting of anti-radar coatings for airplanes, submarines, and other weapons.

Discovered by Allies

The OWI said these and other details of the enemy's inner war secrets were uncovered by special teams of American and British investigators who were operating in many cases close behind the front lines. This was necessary, it was explained, to prevent the Nazis from destroying their plans and laboratory installations.

Some of the other things on which the allies found the Germans working were:

New war gases which they hoped would prove more deadly than any other chemical agent known to the civilized world.

Advanced jet planes with rocket assisted take-offs and revolutionary aerodynamic design.

Find Skip Torpedoes

New liquid propellants to prevent detection of the wake of torpedos and new types of air torpedoes of the "skip" type.

Long range, smooth bore guns to fire rocket assisted, finned projectiles; a "squeeze" gun that obtained higher velocities and longer range thru use of a tapered bore.

Also in allied hands as a result of the inquiries which have continued thruout Germany since the end of the war is a new device developed by the enemy for reducing the wear on barrels of heavy guns, one of the most difficult problems in sustained artillery operations.

Still other nazi developments ranged from improved magnetic and nonmagnetic anti-tank and anti-personnel mines to the use of salt water from the sea in electric torpedo propulsion.

The work on long-range rockets was described as "sensational."

Discoveries Aid America

Many of the secrets had great potential value for America's use in the war against Japan, the OWI said, and were being adapted as rapidly as possible for the Pacific theater when the war ended.

Many of the synthetics devised by the Germans have been pronounced inferior to the American types but others have won praise from allied experts. One example of where the enemy was outstanding, said the OWI, was in processes for manufacture of synthetic rubber, now being made available to United States producers.

Similarly, the OWI said, the German methods for producing gasoline and lubricants will provide important keys for industry in this country. Beside producing butter from coal, the Nazis succeeded in converting coal to alcohol of both beverage and industrial types, and aviation lubricants, soap, and gasoline.

Capt. John O'Malley of the Shakespeare av. police station departed yesterday for Norfolk, Va., to question a sailor in connection with the mysterious death Aug. 14 of Mrs. Mildred Bollenbach, 21, of 3846 Diversey av., a soldier's wife.

Mrs. Bollenbach was found dead in her apartment, half dressed and with her hands tied loosely behind her back, after her 2 year old son wandered nude into the street. The inquest has been continued to Aug. 30. No marks of violence were on the body.

Dr. S. A. Levinson, coroner's pathologist, said yesterday he still is awaiting a report on tests made to determine whether the woman was poisoned.

PEOPLE have gone wild over DDT as a result of the enormous amount of publicity the insecticide has received, and now that it is available to the public some rules should be laid down for its use.

Most important of all, it should be remembered that DDT is a poison. Users should realize this and discount any stories they have heard to the contrary. One man immersed his arm in a barrel of 5 per cent DDT solution for several minutes to see what would happen. The result was paralysis of the arm for four months.

Many Ask Instructions

Manufacturing concerns have been deluged with requests for the insecticide. Persons who buy it have no idea how to use the chemical. This column has received hundreds of calls from purchasers asking instructions. They have no idea what percentage DDT their insecticide contains, and as a result no instructions can be given.

DDT may be bought as a pure chemical. In this case it must be mixed with a solvent before it can be used. DDT will not mix with water, so a base of kerosene or talc is used. Other carriers are used by various producers of DDT.

DDT also may be bought as a dust. Usually this comes as a dust containing 2, 3, or 5 per cent DDT. When purchased in this form it is intended for direct application to vegetables and other plants. Another powder form of DDT insecticide carrying from 25 to 50 per cent DDT is already mixed with a carrier and is intended as a spray. DDT in this form may be mixed directly with water to form a milk white solution which may be used in spray guns.

Knowledge is Safety

Another form of DDT is an insecticide in liquid form. This usually is a deodorized kerosene containing 20 to 50 per cent DDT. Such solutions can be mixed with water and applied with a spray.

Any one purchasing DDT must make sure they have explicit instructions from the producer on how to use it. The buyer should know whether he has a dust or powder or liquid mix for spraying. He should know what per cent of DDT the insecticide contains.

Remember, DDT is poisonous to humans and animals. Also it is not poisonous to all insects. It will not act as a repellent and drive insects away and it may take up to 40 hours to kill an insect.

The GARDEN by Ben Markland

[This is the first of a series of articles on autumn reseeding of lawns.]

THE last week of August and the first two weeks of September is the ideal period for making new lawns or reseeding established turf. Lawn experts are almost unanimous in their opinion that this is a much better time than spring. If portions of the lawn need light spading, the topsoil is dry enough to be worked easily, whereas in the spring the ground may remain wet from spring thaws and rains so long that the topsoil cannot be prepared readily for seeding. In addition, the period of weed germination has passed, and fall sown grass seed has little competition from this source.

Grass seeds sown at this time of the year sends down deeper roots than seed sown in the spring, and there usually is enough September rainfall to reduce the necessity for watering.

Altgeld Gardens Housing Dedicated Before 5,000

The 157 acre Altgeld Gardens housing project southwest of Lake Calumet was dedicated yesterday as a crowd estimated at nearly 5,000 gathered to hear speeches by Ald. Kells [28th], Chairman Temple McFayden of the state housing board, Congressman Rowan, and Chairman Robert Taylor of the Chicago housing commission. Approximately 7,000 persons, nearly all Negroes, have moved into the project, which cost 9 million dollars.

TELL HOW 'OBOE' RADAR LED PILOT RIGHT TO TARGET

Even Told Him When to Drop Bombs

AN R. A. F. BOMBER BASE, England, Aug. 26 (AP)—The British air ministry today made known the workings of a highly effective form of radar called "oboe," which led bombers to targets in Germany on beams sent out from ground stations in England, and even told bombardiers when to release bombs.

These stations, it was disclosed, were able to "watch" planes along the entire route, in fog, storm, or darkness, and were a major factor in blasting Hitler's war plants.

Just Followed Beam

If the Krupp armament works at Essen was the target, a radar beam 17 feet wide would be aimed at the city from a ground station near Dover. That is believed to be one reason for so much German cross-channel shelling of Dover. The beam would hit Essen right over the Krupp works, just like an imaginary wire rope hanging in the sky.

Bombers would take off and make a beeline for Essen. Wherever they intercepted the beam, automatic signals would start flashing and coded dots and dashes begin coming over the earphones. All a pilot had to do was turn squarely onto the beam and follow it to the target.

When he reached a certain point, so many seconds from the assigned target, he received a coded "release bombs" signal from the ground operator back in England.

Gives Automatic Accuracy

When the pilot returned he could see his bomb run recorded in black and white on a graph made by an electrical instrument similar to weather graphing machines.

Airmen say "oboe" gives them virtually automatic accuracy to within eight yards of the smallest target.

American 8th and 9th air forces adopted much of the R. A. F. radar technique and developed some new methods of their own.

The Germans had a radar system but always lagged behind the allies in new developments, and were never able to solve the mystery of how to counteract it for defensive purposes.

EXPECTS COLOR TELEVISION ON AIR BY NEW YEAR

Washington, D. C., Aug. 26 (AP)—The Columbia Broadcasting system announced today it expects to begin broadcasting a new system of color television in New York City before the end of the year.

Dr. Peter C. Goldmark, CBS director of engineering research and developments, said in a broadcast talk that the new transmitter will be installed in the spire of the Chrysler building.

He said the new ultra-high frequency color television also will provide black and white pictures "with more picture detail.

EXPECT ARMY TO ACT FAST IN WARD TRANSFER

Complicated Move May Start at Once

The procedure by which the army will return the Montgomery Ward & Co. properties it seized by Presidential order last December was expected yesterday to get under way at once, possibly today. Termination of army control of Ward's seized plants and the properties of 23 other companies placed under government control was directed Saturday night by President Truman.

The first step probably will be taken by the army, as it did when it returned the Ward owned Hummer Manufacturing company of Springfield, maker of airplane parts, on July 2, after more than a year of army administration. But that instruction was simple. An officer gave company officials a statement of terms. Ward objected to one clause, which was revised on the spot, and the transfer was completed in three hours.

Transfer of Stores Complicated

Return of the retail stores, which the government took over in Chicago and six other cities, will be complicated. The army has operated them for eight months, buying stock and selling it, and the accounting is expected to require three weeks or longer. A day must be set when the army ends its tenure and the company takes over. Ward officials have suggested that Friday, the end of the month, is a logical date.

No word from the army was available yesterday. Maj. Gen. David McCoach Jr., commanding the 6th service command, returned from Washington Saturday from a conference that preceded the announcement of President Truman's order.

Union Also Silent

The third party in the situation, the United Retail, Wholesale, and Department Store Employes [CIO], also was silent. It was the union's demand for maintenance of membership, check-off of union dues, and wage increases with retroactive pay that brought on the crisis, which the late President Roosevelt interpreted as a hindrance to war production.

Returning the stores will leave the union in the same relationship with Ward that existed nearly two years ago, when the company contended that war labor board directives in favor of the union were without authority and refused to obey them. Until recently the union had protested the government's release of control. Its latest attitude was that a public hearing should precede any action.

LIE TEST TRAPS 7 GERMANS WHO KILLED COMRADE

Chicagoan Uses 'Box' to Gain Confessions

The lie detector was given credit yesterday for the conviction of seven German prisoners of war who were hanged early Saturday at Fort Leavenworth, Kas.

Leonarde Keeler

The "map test" technique was used by Leonarde Keeler of Chicago, who was summoned to the prisoner of war camp in Arizona after a German had been lynched by his comrades because he had turned against Hitlerism.

There were several thousand uncommunicative prisoners in the compound. Army officials were confined to one fact—that one prisoner had said he knew one of the murderers but was mortally afraid of identifying him.

Murderers' Barracks Located

Keeler strapped the prisoner in his machine, which is known as the polygraph by scientists and as the lie box by the men who operate it. On a map he pointed to various sections of the camp and asked, thru an interpreter, if the guilty men were quartered there.

When dials on the detector fluctuated abnormally, Keeler started pointing out specific barracks. The prisoner reacted violently, if unwillingly, when a certain building was reached.

All Eventually Confess

The rest was a matter of time. Keeler obtained the names of the 50 men quartered in the barracks and read them to the prisoner, whose blood pressure and respiration reached a peak of tension again on one of the names. That led to the first of the guilty men, who was soon revealing the names of his accomplices.

All seven confessed before their conviction, Keeler said.

DUMP SPRAYED WITH DDT AS CHECK ON POLIO

City employes yesterday sprayed the dump near 103d and Doty sts. with several hundred gallons of a solution containing DDT, war time insecticide discovery, as a precautionary measure against the spread of infantile paralysis in the district. A shanty at the dump which was swarming with flies in the morning, was free of them yesterday afternoon, following the spraying, and dead flies littered the floor. The single application is expected to prove effective for several months.

McLoughlin, superintendent of St. Monica's hospital here. The twins, girls, were born last night to Mrs. Rita Miranda. After nearly 24 hours of existence they were described by the Rev. McLoughlin as having an average chance of survival.

CAR KILLS WIFE CROSSING ROAD WITH HUSBAND

Mrs. Ella Hemperly, 60, of 2440 Oak st., Blue Island, was killed by an automobile yesterday as she and her husband, Russell Hemperly, an Illinois Central conductor, were crossing Halsted st., between 109th and 110th sts. Two Negroes in the car were arrested. They are Mrs. Bessie Clark, 38, of 1104 W. 112th st., who told police she was driving, and her husband, Otis, 37, whom witnesses identified as the driver. Policeman John O'Connor asserted both occupants had been drinking.

F. WERFEL DIES; AUTHOR OF SONG OF BERNADETTE

Beverly Hills, Cal., Aug. 26 (AP)—Franz Werfel, 54, author of the book "Song of Bernadette," which became an academy award motion picture, died suddenly at his home here today.

His play, "The Eternal Road," was a Broadway success in 1937 and two seasons ago "Jacobowsky and the Colonel," adapted from one of his comedies, was a long-running play.

In 1939 and 1940 he was a prisoner in a French concentration camp, but escaped to the United States.

Werfel recently announced completion of his latest novel—"Star of the Unborn"—written after many visits to Santa Barbara, Cal.

TELL HOW CREW CAMPED OUT ON DECK OF SHIP

Mare Island, Cal., Aug. 26 (AP)—The crew of the Pacific fleet destroyer transport Blessman had to camp out on deck for four days at the time of the American invasion of Iwo island, it was recounted today after the vessel had been repaired and sent back to sea.

Two 500 pound bombs ripped into the Blessman the night before the Yanks went ashore. One of them exploded in the messroom, destroying the cooking facilities.

Crewmen rigged an outdoor stove of sheet metal and firebrick on the fantail, and amateur cooks recruited among officers and enlisted men alike prepared three meals a day while other members of the crew cleared the debris.

POLIO SURVIVORS ASKED TO GIVE BLOOD TO CLINIC

CHARGES UNION BLOCKS RETURN OF TIRE PLANTS

Akron, O., Aug. 26 (AP)—Return of five navy-seized Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company plants to management has been blocked by the failure of local union officials to consent to federal arbitration in future labor disputes, Capt. Harry K. Clark, navy chief of operations, said today in an interview.

Capt. Clark said the navy's withdrawal from the plants, seized July 5 after an 18 day strike of 16,500 CIO United Rubber Workers, was snagged yesterday by the "unwillingness" of the union local to agree to refer all disputes to government agencies for settlement.

The navy had notified company officials and workers of its decision to withdraw, he said, when the national war labor board requested the Goodyear union local to stipulate in writing that the WLB or a similar agency was to act in any later disputes. The union failed to indicate that it favored such arbitration, Capt. Clark said.

REPORT ARABS WILL DEMAND FREE PALESTINE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Aug. 26—Independence for Palestine is to be demanded in a memorandum soon to be submitted to the British government by the Arab league, according to reports in diplomatic circles. Mahmoud Nokrashy Pasha, the Egyptian premier, is understood to be drafting the document, copies of which will be sent to the United States, France, Russia, and China.

The memorandum will oppose partition of Palestine into Arab and Jewish states and will point out that with the end of the fascist regimes in Europe persecution of the Jews has ended, and therefore there is no further justification for Jewish emigration.

Meanwhile there are indications that Britain's Labor government, in view of Arab opposition, will not attempt to turn Palestine into a Jewish state.

NAVY SALVAGE ESTIMATED AT MANY MILLIONS

Washington, D. C., Aug. 26 (AP)—Military and naval craft, valued at millions of dollars, in addition to an estimated 600 million dollars in sunken merchant ships and cargo, were salvaged during the war, the navy announced today.

One of the last and largest jobs of naval salvage units prior to the Japanese surrender was the clearing of 600 vessels from Manila bay. Many had been sunk by American army and navy flyers prior to the Philippine invasion and others were scuttled by the Japanese.

The Manila bay job began after the Lingayen gulf landings last January and was in full swing within two weeks, with 600 men and 60 officers engaged in the task while fighting off Japanese snipers who would swim to the wrecks at night to pick off the salvage crews when they returned to work the next day.

AN APOLOGETIC SNEEZER LANDS IN JAIL AS THIEF

Guillermo Collins, 34, a Negro, of 6244 Langley av., a pickpocket whose system is to sneeze on his victims, apologize profusely, and rob them as he brushes them off with his handkerchief, was identified yesterday at a police showup. S. I. Frank, a furniture manufacturer at 2412 North av., said Collins stole his wallet containing $250 on Aug. 13.

Frank said Collins stole the wallet in the subway station near Jackson blvd. while pretending to wipe his vest. Collins was very apologetic, Frank said, when he sneezed on him.

Collins was arrested Friday by Policeman Lloyd Casey who said he saw him picking the pocket of a passenger on a street car at 63d st. and Eberhart av. Police said Collins had a record of arrests since 1932, and served a penitentiary sentence in Elmira, N. Y., for grand larceny.

Chicago Golf Club Planning Festive Labor Day Week-End

BY JUDITH CASS

WITH the relaxation of gasoline rationing, the Labor Day week-end promises to be more like those of pre-war days, with countless motorists on the highways and near-by country homes and resorts filled to overflowing.

The Chicago Golf club, which has been a week-ender's paradise during the war years, expects every room and cottage to be taken over the three day holiday. It will give its first party of the summer, a dinner-dance and games party on Saturday. Golf tournaments are planned for Sunday and Monday.

The Chicago Golf club has been nearly denuded of young men during the war, and its members will be more lighthearted than in many months now that so many sons and husbands will be returning soon Nearing the end of another pleasant summer spent in the club's cottages are the Frank A. Millers, the Henry Faurots, and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Ellis. Mrs. Mark Oliver and Irving Allen are other members of the permanent summer cottage colony.

One of the two other cottages reserved for temporary guests will be taken for the month of September by the John Jay Bryants. The other will be occupied next week-end by Mr. and Mrs. Merrill C. Meigs.

The Brick House, as the club's guests residential home is known, is an excellent source of extra men for Chicago Golf hostesses. Living there are John D. Black, Robert Purchas, Edward Eagle Brown, John Watsek, and Col. James B. Kaine. Also in the Brick House are the Irving Porters, the Ralph Chapmans, and William Freeman, whose wife is spending the summer in North Carolina. The club is Chicago's oldest golf club and has one of the smallest memberships in the country.

Other Holiday Events

In Hinsdale the holiday tempo will be quickened by a round of parties in connection with the Oak Brook Polo club horse show on Saturday and Sunday. A dance Saturday night at the Hinsdale Golf club will be the largest of the horse show parties with the exhibitors, the horse show committee, and their friends attending full strength.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Butler are entertaining at cocktails before the dance. Earlier on Saturday Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence E. Johnson Jr. will give a luncheon for the judges, who are to be Col. Hiram Tuttle, retired from active army duty last year, and Harry Strickland of Chicago. Col. Tuttle, who was on the staff of the cavalry school at Fort Riley, Kas., is one of this country's leading dressage riders, and was a member of the United States Army Olympic team.

Gen. and Mrs. Marcellus L. Stockton will give a luncheon on Sunday for the judges, and after the last class is run off late Sunday afternoon the Polo club will give a cocktail party for the exhibitors, guests, and friends of the horse show. Two Minnesota exhibitors who will be here are Miss Eileen Bigelow of St. Paul, who will stay with the L. F. [Pete] Caufields, and William F. Anderson of White Bear Lake, who will stay at the Hinsdale Golf club. The latter is bringing four horses, and the former, two.

There are a few parking spaces still available at $7.50 plus tax per car for the two days.

Benefit Party Plans

By the time the woman's general committee of the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society meets for luncheon on Sept. 19 in the Woman's Athletic club, its members will be ready to make final arrangements for a gala ball which the group will give on Dec. 8 in the Drake hotel. Mrs. Jacob Baur, chairman of the committee and of the ball, will return on Sept. 4 from Beverly Hills, Cal., where she has been spending the summer with Mrs. William Yeager, a former Chicagoan. During Mrs. Baur's absence Mrs. Thomas J. Fleming, who is co-chairman with Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, and Mrs. James M. Hopkins have been hard at work on preliminary details, and Mrs. Frank A. Hiter has been lining up advertisments for the program to be distributed among the 1,200 guests.

The first week in October a benefit office will be opened in the Drake hotel. The committee will take turns serving in the office and will hold three meetings a week. The last large party given by the group was a Christmas ball in 1941 at the Drake.

On the Calendar

The 24 hour visit to Chicago of Gen. Charles de Gaulle, provisional president of France, will give members of the French-speaking groups who normally would entertain for the visitor scarcely more than a fleeting glimpse of him. Gen. de Gaulle will arrive by plane from New York today, in time for a dinner which Mayor Kelly will give in the Blackstone hotel. Tomorrow noon he will pay an official visit to the mayor's office, and they will drive from there to a luncheon of the Association of Commerce at the Palmer House. Mrs. John Paul Welling, Mr. and Mrs. Quincy Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, Mrs. Charles Lebret, and Mrs. Grover Winston are among the members of French societies who will attend the luncheon. The members of France Forever will meet the general tomorrow afternoon at a reception which he is giving at 3 p. m. in the Blackstone.

The walls of the Saddle and Cycle club will ring with merriment between 8:30 p. m. and midnight tonight, for 70 cadets of the Coast Guard academy in New London, Conn., who are stopping over here on the academy's first fresh water training course in history, will be entertained at a gay party. Fifty debutantes and post-debutantes will be on hand as their partners. Among the young women invited to share the fun by Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Curtis, host and hostess of the evening, are the Curtises' daughter, Clair, and the Misses Joan Butler, Suzanne and Jean Sullivan, Evelyn Allen, Julie Beich, Sally Sample, Meredith Leverone, Margaret Loomis, Eloise Hughes, Elizabeth Shannon, and Jean and Valerie Horgan.

At noon tomorrow, Mr. and Mrs. George J. Durfey of Oak Park, whose son, Robert, is on the cruise, will entertain at luncheon in the Stevens hotel for the young visitors. The cruise will give Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Bennett Richards of Lake Bluff a chance to see their son-in-law, Lt. George T. Beemer, who is one of the officers in charge. Lt. and Mrs. Beemer have been living in New London.

Outlook Rosy for Plenty of Clothing Soon

Washington, D. C., Aug. 26 (AP)—Clothing for women and children will be piled high in stores by November. So will such things as sheets and towels. Men's clothes will be less plentiful.

That was the forecast today by industrial leaders and government officials. It was the brightest authoritative picture yet on the clothing outlook. Its brightness is attributable to the unexpected speed with which the army canceled most of its plans for buying clothing materials.

One official even said the nation can look forward to a "Christmas shopper's paradise" in women's and children's clothing.

Most items of men's clothing will be made in good quantity. Shirts and shorts will be produced at a rate 90 to 95 per cent of their 1939 volume, manufacturers predict. But heavy sales to millions of discharged veterans are expected to keep retail stocks at low levels until after the first of the year.

Wide selections of sheets, towels, and household textile items should be available for Christmas, it was said.

Women already know that nylon hose can be had by Thanksgiving or Christmas. Nylon blouses, lingerie, and even dresses are also on the way. The new fabric may also be used for drapes and curtains.

Two way stretch girdles and corsets will reach stores within six to eight weeks after manufacturing begins. You'll probably see them in November.

Es early as September, low priced cotton dresses will begin to reappear. Many will be in the $3.50 to $12.75 price range.

Wool overcoats and topcoats for men will be turned out rapidly. So will work clothes. Slowest to reappear in quantities will be men's suits, because worsted suiting is only beginning to come back.

McLennan, who has just returned from duty in the Pacific, will take his bride to Newport, R. I., after a two week wedding trip. She is the daughter of R. Miles Warner of Greenwich, Conn.

In St. Stephen's church, Richmond, Va., last Saturday, Maj. Clifton Stevenson Brown Jr., formerly of Chicago, took Miss Em Bowles Locker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Clyde Locker of Richmond, as his bride. Maj. Brown is the son of Mrs. George Catlett Marshall, wife of Gen. Marshall, chief of staff of the United States army, and of the late Mr. Brown of Baltimore, Md. Bishop Henry St. George Tucker, presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church of the United States, officiated, assisted by the Rev. Giles B. Palmer. A reception followed in the Country Club of Virginia.

Maj. Brown's best man was Assistant Secretary of State Frank McCarthy of Washington, D. C., and Richmond. The bridegroom's sister, Mrs. James J. Winn of Leesburg, was matron of honor. The bride is a graduate of St. Catherine's school, Richmond, and of Vassar college. Maj. Brown has just returned from two years of combat duty in the European theater.

The marriage of Lt. [j. g.] Martha Eleanor Siefkin of the WAVES, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Forest Dewitt Siefkin of Glencoe, and Lt. John Douglas Gordon of the naval air forces took place on Friday in the chapel at the Bronson field auxiliary air station in Florida, where the bride is stationed. Miss Betsy Siefkin was her sister's only attendant. A reception followed at the Officers' club. Lt. Gordon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh T. Gordon of San Marino, Cal., recently returned from a year's duty in the Pacific, where he was awarded the air medal. He is stationed at the naval air station in Jacksonville, Fla.

The bridegroom, who served in Italy and was awarded the bronze star, is on a 30 day furlough.

White Collar GIRL

Encouragement

The Human Engineering Laboratory, in a report of the years 1940 to 1945, calls attention to several problems for future research. One of these is the study of the reasons for the apparent decline of aptitudes with advancing years.

The accounting aptitude, for example, denotes speed and proficiency in clerical operations. More women than men excel in it. According to the laboratory, the accounting aptitude "comes of age" between 14 and 19, remains unchanged until about 30 and then deteriorates. What is the reason for this change?

"It is possible," says this report, "that eyesight may be a contributing factor in this decline." With such a possibility in mind a new test has been developed using larger type. As yet the results are unknown, but it is one step toward discovering the nature of the obstacles that stand in the path of older workers. With science on their side, and correction of physical defects, such as eyesight, middle-aged employes may be good for long, efficient service. Surely there is reason for encouragement for the great group of 40-plus workers who daily don white collars.

Mystery confronted me
In that long eternity
From the time the phone began
Ringing, while I walked, then ran,
Wondering who it could be,
Till I answered, finally.

Handsomest Man in Town

I nominate my boss as the handsomest man in town—hair white, what there is of it; figure, rather dumpy; voice, fog hornish, but when he says, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, "Well, let's call it a day," I could hug him, married or no. Pretty good about Saturdays, too!

Without the Stilts

Another authority for the expression, "Amn't I?" was Dr. William Lyon Phelps. He said it is just as correct as the contraction, "Isn't he?" and less stilted in everyday conversation than "Am I not?"

Better Late Than Never, "Carmen Jones" Swirls Its Spanish Shawl Curtain on Brilliance

Billy Rose spent Saturday afternoon cruising our lake front admiringly, no doubt envisioning Lake Michigan as one vast aquacade, and as much of Chicago as could crowd into the Erlanger spent Saturday [and probably Sunday] night admiring Mr. Rose's "Carmen Jones." The Negro "Carmen" that bowled over Broadway two years ago was a bit late arriving, but all was forgiven when its Spanish shawl of a curtain swirled up over a performance honed to razor's edge, a performance easy with routine, yet taut with the indefinable tension that can send a first night, however belated, flaring into brilliance.

I like the show better in the Erlanger than in New York's Broadway, which is rather a theatrical barn. You get a break in understanding Oscar Hammerstein's amazingly adroit lyrics, the music is scaled to sound right in a medium sized theater, and "Carmen Jones" has the kind of acting that will bear a close-up. It also has in Muriel Smith one of the best Carmens I ever laid eyes or ears on. I missed her in New York, which means I didn't really see the show.

When Miss Smith got the role she was less than 20 and had been cutting film in a camera shop for $15 a week, a job which puzzles me because I always thought film was inflammable. She is a handsome girl with a warmly beautiful mezzo-soprano, but that isn't the half of it. She has a high voltage impact that takes instant possession of one of the lyric stage's great roles. The Habanera might have been written for her special brand of open aisle seduction, smouldering violence and curiously defiant honesty that accepts the challenge of death's warning card and looks contemptuously at death's dagger when a swerve would save her. This is an extraordinary performance without a false move. It has passion and fire and high-handed disdain of what voluptuousness has discarded.

As Don José in an M. P.'s armband, Mr. Reed does a remarkable job. He has learned a lot about acting since he left Chicago, and there is concentration in his performance that focuses with relentless precision on ultimate violence. His voice is rich in emotional overtones and he manages the occasional shift of theatrical gear from dialog to operatic declamation with considerable skill. Miss Warren's Cindy Lou is no Micaela in terms of operatic song, but few Micaelas are up to Miss Warren when it comes to getting an audience on her side.

Husky Glenn Bryant misses the tingle of a brilliant Escamillo, but he is a big fellow who can handle the fistic honors of Husky Miller's "Stan' up and fight." Buck and Bubbles are his managers in suits wonderful and fearful to behold—one of them has white rickrack stripes—and they join Miss Smith and the melodious June Hawkins and Theresa Merritts in "Whizzin' away along de track," which is our old friend the quintet on its way to Chicago, and one of the deftest bits of Hammerstein lyric lore.

There is no pretending that the parachute factory of "Carmen Jones" isn't a little dated in post-war playgoing, but then "Carmen Jones" was never in any danger of being as timeless as "Carmen." It is merely a flashing darktown variation on a fabulous theme, and a good one, done with skill and high spirits, in brilliant settings and outrageously amusing costumes. And who can tell, maybe opera will borrow a tip or two. Some of the Hammerstein brand of English lyrics, perhaps, or a Hassard Short trick of letting you see right thru the stadium walls to a prize fight in all its fistic glory.

"CARMEN JONES"

No Big Change of Fashion Is Seen This Year

BY REA SEEGER

Fashions will not be changed because the war is over, experts say. Silhouettes will stay pretty much the same, in flattering streamlines. Not until next spring will there be any great changes, such as full skirts, and extreme sleeves.

Allocation of available material, the fact that government control of cloth still is clamped on tight, and that spring and next season's fashions are in the making and cutting, makes it certain that fashions will go on, at least thru December, with little if any changes.

However, there are definite hints of future changes. The sloping shoulder lines, the wider and larger sleeves, and the clearly defined and smaller waist lines in the fall and winter collections surely foreshadow coming changes.

What is changing goes on smoothly and slowly. There will be no sudden reversals, no Monday when the straight line silhouette is high fashion, to be out by Tuesday. Coats and suits, dresses and ensembles selected now will be as up-to-date as tomorrow's headline all thru the fall and winter season.

Hats are much more revolutionary than clothes. The sensational new altitudes, the gigantic sizes and shapes, the new head silhouettes already have made history. Some of the conservatives still are gasping over the first authentic millinery showings of the fall and winter hats of 1945. The new hats are an after the war surge of dramatics to the head.

BUT, if you've already selected and purchased your winter coat and suit, have no regrets. The models will be snappy and in high fashion for months. The silhouette change is not here yet!

'This Nettle Danger'

By William MacLeod Raine

(Copyright: 1945: By William MacLeod Raine)

SYNOPSIS: In the feud between homesteaders and cattlemen Bruce Sherrill, leader of the homesteaders, is wounded. Trapped, he rides to the ranch of Cliff Applegate, his chief enemy. Linda Applegate hides him because he is wounded. When Linda and her father tell Jeff Randall what they have done Cliff and Jeff quarrel bitterly. A former Rough Rider, Bruce goes to Washington and gets the President's promise to investigate the feud. After a quarrel with his father Ben Randall visits the Applegates. He suspects Linda has more than a humane interest in Bruce. Two government men arrive. While Bruce is rounding up cattle a shot misses him. In self-defense he shoots Wally Jelks. Randall witnesses the shooting and reports it to the government men. To Linda and Ben, Rod admits Jelks got what he deserved. Linda flays him for his unfairness, and Rod realizes she is too independent to be his wife. Jeff conspires with Cairns for a frame-up raid. Bruce persuades Sheriff Humphreys that Cairns could have planned the raid to prejudice the government men against the homesteaders. Fearing Flack may talk under pressure, Jeff pays Milroy to kill him. Flack's diary shows he was paid by Randall for spying. The government orders all fences inclosing government land taken down. Linda is spied upon by Cairns when she is bathing in a swimming hole. Her brother rescues her and beats up Cairns. Cliff adds a lashing. Jeff suggests to Cairns to hit Linda thru Bruce, with whom she is in love. There's a rumor Humphreys has found a witness to Flack's murder.

INSPECTION TOUR

Prop Zang came to Sheriff Humphreys with an odd story. He had recently employed to help him at the corral a young cowpuncher named Sim Tepley, who had been riding thru this country on the chuck line. An oldtimer who did odd jobs had been sleeping in the hay at the barn of the Elephant one night and awakened to hear voices in one of the stalls below. One of the two in conversation was Tepley, the other a range rider he had known in Montana. Next day old Libby came to Zang and told him what he had heard.

In strict confidence Tepley had let out to his friend that he felt sure he had seen the murderer of Flack a few minutes after the killing. The time of the crime he had camped on the creek a couple of hundred yards below Flack's cabin. He had been riding all day and before he reached the house the light went out. He decided to wait until morning, then drop in on whoever lived there in time to join him at breakfast.

Later in the night he had been awakened by the sound of a horse's hoofs on the trail a few yards from him. The traveler was heading for the cabin. Tepley settled himself to go to sleep again, but before he could do so the sound of a pistol shot startled him. He crept close to the trail and crouched back of a thick clump of bushes, and presently a mounted man passed within four feet of him.

When breakfast time came, Tepley saw no smoke rising from the cabin chimney. The puncher opened the door and found a man lying dead on the floor.

It did not take Tepley long to get out of that part of the district. He was a stranger and might easily become suspect. The best course was to keep his mouth shut. This he had done until the night he met an old friend upon whom he could rely.

The sheriff and the prosecuting attorney put Tepley thru a stiff questioning. At first the cowboy denied the whole tale, but after he had made sure they held no thought of his own guilt he threw up his hands and admitted its truth. He had been close enough to get a good look at the man and thought he would recognize him if they met again.

Humphreys decided to tour the district with Tepley and give him a chance to look over the inhabitants. Five men had heard the story. That was too many. The weak link in the chain was Libby. The sheriff warned Libby earnestly not to tell anybody what he had learned. Unfortunately the old toper drank too much that night and babbled his story to a room full in a saloon.

With Tepley posing as his deputy Humphreys left town that afternoon. The two men talked with every homesteader on Squaw creek and crossed over the hogback to the Quartercircle D. C. There they spent the night. In the morning they rode to the Bar B B, in time to see its riders before they set off to work. Nobody they had yet met was the horseman Tepley had seen.

The Applegates were pleased to have Humphreys drop in, and Linda insisted he and his companion stay for dinner. The sheriff was sorry he had not time. They had to get on to the Diamond Tail to talk with Randall. It was more than an hour after they had left that Bruce Sherrill rode up to the house on a horse that had been ridden hard.

Linda came to the door. "You!"

"No, he left a little while ago," the girl told him. "Has something happened?"

"It may, if I don't reach him in time. Can I get a fresh horse?"

Linda's father came to the porch from the house. "Why don't you come at night?" he asked. "Then you could take one without a by-your-leave, as you did last time."

"I'm sorry, Mr. Applegate," Bruce answered. "This is urgent. I'm afraid there will be a killing, unless I can head off Humphreys."

"What do you mean—a killing?" the ranchman demanded. "Who is going to get killed?"

"Maybe nobody. But an hour ago a man just back from Redrock dropped in at the ranch. He says the talk is buzzing all over town that the young man Humphreys has with him, the one he claims is his deputy, is a witness to the killing of Flack. They have been all up and down Squaw and Bear creeks, over to my place, and then here. This Tepley claims he would know the man again if he saw him. That's the story they are telling. Tim is giving him a chance to look us all over."

"What's wrong with that? It will suit me fine if they find the scoundrel and arrest him."

"They won't arrest him. They'll be shot down. Humphreys doesn't know it has got out that Tepley is a witness to the killing. He'll be knocked off without a chance for his life—he and Tepley too."

"You're assuming he'll run across the guilty man," Applegate differed. "Chances are 10 to one he won't."

Bruce looked at him hard and long. "He'll find the man if they go to the Diamond Tail. The murderer has to be one of two men—Bill Cairns or Quint Milroy. Do you think either one of them would let Tepley get back to Redrock alive if he can identify the killer?"

The cattleman spoke to his daughter sharply. "Tell Grant to saddle Buck for me. I'm going over to the Diamond Tail. Have him rope Nugget for Sherrill."

He went into the house for his Winchester. Bruce walked beside Linda to the stable, leading his spent horse.

She said, "Do you think Uncle Jeff had anything to do with this?"

"I don't know," he answered. "I believe the killing was hatched at the Diamond Tail, but if Cairns did it he might have played a lone hand."

"I hope you catch Mr. Humphreys before he reaches the Diamond Tail. It isn't safe for you there, nor for father either."

Embarrassment brought a deeper color to her cheeks. "Something happened here the other day. The man—overstepped himself. Father gave him a terrible beating. We weren't going to talk about it, but—I wish he weren't going to the Diamond Tail while the fellow is there."

"I'll keep an eye on Cairns while your father is around," Bruce promised.

"Thank you. I don't know why I ask this of you, since you have so many more enemies there than he has. And anyhow, you are not one of us. I have no right to expect you to watch out for him."

He said, his voice low and gentle: "Not long ago a girl looked out for me, an enemy of her family. She saved me from my foes, who were ready to pounce on and kill me. She fought for me against her father and her brothers. She dressed my wound and she nursed me. And more than all that she believed in me when others didn't."

Linda felt a queer sense of weakness, of stilled pulses. She did not dare to look at him.

She watched the two men ride away. Linda thought her father held a reluctant admiration for Bruce, a feeling he certainly would not admit.

What Linda felt was a little frightening. When Bruce looked at her she had a sense of being drawn to him irresistibly.

ANSWERS TO SATURDAY'S QUIZ

Q. 1—As dealer you hold:
♠ A9532 ♥ K76543 ♦ A ♣ 6

What do you bid?

A.—One spade. On hands of this type where considerable bidding may be expected from other players at the table, it is better policy to treat the heart suit as the 5 were the same length as the spades. In this way both suits may be shown in the most economical manner during the competition.

Q. 2—Partner doubles the opening bid of one club and you hold:
♠ Q6 ♥ J976 ♦ Q2 ♣ KJ764

What is your response?

A.—One heart. A pass for penalties is improper. Remember your clubs are under the bidder and subject to encirclement. The heart call is preferable to one no trump because partner is probably looking for a major suit response. If partner takes further action you may bid no trump later.

Q. 3—You are South, both sides have 60 part score, and you hold:
♠ Q73 ♥ 5 ♦ KQ942 ♣ K643

The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 heart	1 spade	2 hearts	?

What do you bid?

A.—Three diamonds. You must contemplate the practical necessity for bidding twice in view of the part score situation. It is a moral certainty that the opponents will contest at three hearts. You will then be in a position to compete once more with a bid of three spades.

Q. 4—As South you hold:
♠ J10932 ♥ K954 ♦ 63 ♣ K7

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 diamond	1 heart
Pass	Pass	Double	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Two spades. A bid of only one spade would be improper because it would give partner the impression that you were bidding merely under compulsion, whereas actually you had almost enough for a free bid of one spade. He cannot expect any more than this, inasmuch as you have refused to bid the first two rounds.

Q. 5—As South you hold:
♠ AJ3 ♥ J4 ♦ AKQ62 ♣ KQJ

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 diamond	Pass	1 heart	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Three no trump. This is by no means a shutout bid. Even if partner has a poor hand you ought to be able to make nine tricks, yet he might not be able to bid again if you jump to only two no trump. If partner has a good hand, there is no reason why he should not give voice to his opinion after the strength announced by the leap to three no trump.

Q. 6—As South you hold:
♠ 42 ♥ 943 ♦ K62 ♣ AKJ54

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 spade	Pass	2 clubs	Pass
2 spades	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Two no trump. Since partner has opened the bidding you may gamble on his having something in hearts. You have the equal of an opening bid and there should be a fair chance for game.

Q. 7—As North you hold:
♠ K76 ♥ KQ32 ♦ J3 ♣ A1063

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 diamond	Pass	1 heart	Pass
3 no trump	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Six no trump. You have almost the equal of an opening bid and partner has opened and made a super-jump. In other words, partner offered to make a game if you had but a trick. You have considerably more. This is the mate to the hand shown in problem 5.

Q. 8—As South you hold:
♠ K7 ♥ 97653 ♦ Q6 ♣ 7432

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
2 diamonds	Pass	2 no trump	Pass
3 hearts	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Five hearts. A bid of only four hearts would show no special strength but merely the ability to play hearts, since you are forced to go on to game, willy-nilly. Remember your previous response has shown nothing, and you have considerable strength opposite a partner who claims to have nearly a game in his own hand.

Help the Deaf Child to Deal with Handicap

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

(Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

Since space in a recent article did not allow for the complete text of Dr. Edmund Prince Fowler's findings on hearing defects of many of our school children, I will finish it today.

Dr. Fowler, president of The American Society for the Hard of Hearing of Washington, D. C., as a result of a study made by that organization, goes on to say, "Mothers and fathers with children suffering from a hearing impairment [as well as adults] can secure authoritative information about all problems connected with impaired hearing, as well as centers for lip reading and social activities, from one of the leagues for the hard of hearing located in 108 cities thruout the United States. All of these are members of The American Society for the Hard of Hearing, 1537 35th st., N. W., Washington, D. C. If there is no league in your city, write to the American society."

Here, then, in these two articles, are definite directions for obtaining help in connection with defective hearing of your child or yourself. I mention you, too, because deafness in a mother or father may create real problems in home life, but need not do so if dealt with intelligently. I know personally at the moment three charming, sociable, and socially popular people—one a woman of 75, one a man of 35, and a woman of 60—whose almost complete deafness is no barrier between them and a full life, and who evince no sign of bitterness or desire to withdraw.

So, if your child is [illegible] the progress you feel he or she should in the classroom and you know him to be healthy and sound in all other respects, make it a point to have his hearing examined.

If he can't be cured, help him to the fullest possible life with his handicap. And do the same for yourself if you are hard of hearing in any way.

In a later article I shall give some references I have recently compiled of authoritative sources of help for hard of hearing and deaf children, including suggestions regarding available education for this group of slightly or seriously handicapped children.

Most of us find it convenient to make our pickles and relishes in small batches which don't take too much time out of one day or clutter our kitchens overmuch. It's easy then to try a number of different recipes in order to have variety in our meals and discover special favorites to be used in future years.

This is a small recipe for catchup, but it may easily be doubled or tripled for a larger quantity.

Tomato Catsup
[About three pints]

- 5 pounds tomatoes, cut in pieces
- 2 large onions, diced
- 1 green pepper, diced
- 6 green apples, diced
- ½ cup cider vinegar
- 6 tablespoons sugar or honey
- 1 teaspoon paprika
- 1 teaspoon allspice
- 1 tablespoon prepared mustard
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 1 teaspoon celery seed
- 5 whole cloves

Wash vegetables, cut, and simmer together until soft. It isn't necessary to skin tomatoes or pare apples. Put thru coarse sieve and add vinegar, sugar, and spices. Tie cloves and celery seed in a cheesecloth bag. Simmer for half an hour, remove spice bag; pour catsup into hot, sterile jars and seal at once.

There are more canned citrus juices on the market than there have been at any time since the war began. Now they are all available for no points, and just when we need them most, too! Tall glasses of chilled orange juice, or orange and grapefruit juice, are just what we want for breakfast and for mid-afternoon or evening refreshment. These canned juices are ready to do their part in punches and other summer beverages, with ginger ale or charged water to give them sparkle.

Canned citrus juices also are good in pie fillings and frozen desserts like this sherbet.

Orange Sherbet
[Serves six]

- 2 egg whites
- 1 cup corn sirup
- 1 cup milk
- 1¼ cups orange juice
- 1 tablespoon lemon or lime juice

Beat egg whites until they hold a soft peak. Blend with other ingredients and pour into freezing tray. Freeze until almost firm, then remove from refrigerator and beat mixture until smooth. Return to refrigerator and freeze until firm.

Thanks to the readers who sent in their milk soap recipes for the correspondent who made the request. This soap matter is getting out of hand. So many readers have written for recipes that we have had them mimeographed, together with some practical soapmaking hints. A standard recipe for homemade soap, a recipe for one bar, and the recipe for the soap made with milk are included. Please send a stamped, addressed envelope for the recipes.

Women Will Tell Story of Life in Hull House

"Twenty Years in Hull House," a discussion of the life and experiences of the social worker, Jane Addams, will be presented by Miss Toby Roseman and Miss May Gould at 8 o'clock tonight in the Woodlawn branch library. The program, sponsored by the Biosophy club, is open without charge to the public.

Crocheted Shoes

BY ELLEN BRUCE

Crocheted play shoes for children and adults are the most comfortable fashion yet to appear. Cotton rug yarn is the medium. The shoes may be of one color, or the soles may be bright red and the shank white, for example. These shoes are washable, for the cotton is boilproof and nonshrinkable.

For instructions in crocheting the play shoes, No. 1087, send 15 CENTS in coin [wrap coin securely] to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth av., New York 1, N. Y.

Peace Swells Army Call for Library Gifts

BY KATHRYN LORING

Apparently there is a world of time for reading if a fellow is serving with Uncle Sam's occupational forces, or if he is confined to a military hospital. Requests received by the Chicago Public library from service men for special materials and specific titles have tripled since V-E day.

Just so long as there is a demand from our uniformed men for books, the library will continue to collect and ship them, Carl B. Roden, chief librarian, has announced. Individual and group donors are urged to leave books or money for the purchase of publications either at the main library or at any of the neighborhood branches.

Attic discards, librarians warn, are not welcomed by the men and are not worth the expense of shipping. Better use those for scrap paper. Recent publications on practically all subjects are requested, as well as best sellers, classics of general interest, biography, detective stories, and up to date educational books.

It was back in July, 1941, that the library started its campaign for reading material for men in service, and since that date it has shipped out 8,000,000 books to all parts of the world. Sorting, handling and shipping expenses are met by the library, and the work is done by library staff members.

Most recent gifts to the campaign include contribution by the Musicians Club of Women of 150 new books for an army post in the Philippines, and $350 given by a Chicago department store employes service men's club for a hospital in the Marianas.

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Aug. 26—Margaret Sullavan, who was practically set to do a Broadway show, has changed her mind again. She's crossing the big pond to England instead to do "Voice of the Turtle," and Leland Hayward's going along. . . . Jeannette MacDonald has been spending her time at Metro looking at "Reunion in Vienna," filmed years ago with John Barrymore and Diana Wynyard, after the Lunts made it a Broadway hit. Arthur Freed will make a musical of it and wants Jeanette for the part Lynn Fontanne created. I hear Sigmund Romberg may do the score. This will be Jeanette's first since "Cairo."

O, to Be in England

Arthur Lyon's top assistant, Noll Gurney, will fly to England this month to open an office. I bet Noll will be making deals for Casey Robinson and many of Arthur's top writers, directors, and stars. But before we go too far with our hands across the seas coöperation, how about Britain's doing something about their law which prohibits Americans from working over there if they can find a Britisher to do the jobs just as well? . . . Frank McCarthy, who's 34 and new assistant secretary of state replacing Archibald MacLeish, got some of his training right here in Hollywood. Frank was graduated from Virginia Military institute, became George Abbott's press relations man for Broadway, came to Hollywood as technical advisor on "Brother Rat" at Warner Brothers, and stayed on to learn more about our movies. Since the war, Frank has been on Gen. Marshall's staff. He got to three major conferences—Tehran, Yalta, and Potsdam. As my mother used to say, "He knows the ropes and it's 'fitten' he should have the job."

A Charm That Is a Charm

All the "Strange Adventure" company—cast, crew, props and electricians—gave Joan Blondell a whopping big surprise birthday party on the set last Saturday. They all pitched in to buy her a gift—the biggest gold ball for her charm bracelet you ever laid eyes on. Clark Gable said, "You'll have to wear your arm in a sling, honey, if you clip that on your bracelet." . . . What recent bride had a hard time finding her bridegroom so the wedding could progress as scheduled? . . . Robert Walker promises that when he disappears again he'll vanish into my house. Then nobody'll be able to make cracks, as they all know I'm old enough to be his mother—and then some. . . . Ann Warner won't be home from Saratoga for another two weeks. Gee whiz, we sure miss her! . . . Jean Benoir says he won't direct pictures for another year. He's starting on an autobiography that'll tell all about his famous father, and about his own experiences in Hollywood. It should make top reading.

Double Trouble for a Crooner

When fans mistook a studio publicity man for crooner Andy Russell at the out-of-town preview of "Stork Club," the guy tried to explain that it was a case of mistaken identity. He got loud boos. Finally a voice from the crowd shouted, "Okay, Russell, I've always been a fan of yours, but if you're going to act this way, I'm not any longer." . . . Bing Crosby and Carmen Cavallaro will make another series of records—that idea's here to stay. . . . Byron Barr will play the American prisoner of war who tracks down Tokyo Rose in the Pine-Thomas production of the same name. . . . Ann Corio was hostess at a birthday and going away party for Martha Raye Sunday. Martha's off to Broadway.

Thru the Looking Glass

If you're in a quandary over a gift to send to your week-end hostess, why not choose some little luxury from the cosmetic counter? Even tho she might have given the impression of being a practical, efficient sort of person with no use for fripperies, we'll bet she'd be flattered and pleased with something that plays up to her sense of femininity.

You can spend a lot or a little on a present of this type and be sure of a gift that's pleasing to any woman. Bath accessories are something on which you can be conservative or run the gamut. A matched set of bath salts, dusting powder, and cologne makes an ideal "bread and butter" gift and if your budget is small just one of these items will suffice.

Sachet powder that she can use for little pillows to tuck in with her lingerie or dab on her person is another sweet thought. Or perhaps you would like to choose some of the very elegant sachet pillows all done up in satin and lace. You'll find the latter in all sizes and shapes and in a broad price range.

Lovely, sweet scented soaps always are acceptable. You can select these in big, fat bath sized cakes or get a box of the smaller, guest size. Buy the soap in a tint to harmonize with the color scheme of the bathroom and your hostess will be doubly pleased with your throughtfulness.

Satin-covered dress hangers perfumed with sachet are another gift worth a second throught. Few women ever have enough of these and they're a remeimbrance with a nice, personal touch.

A set of nail polishes, one or two lipsticks, or a box of her favorite face powder deserve consideration, too. Just shop around at the toilet goods counters and we're sure you will find something that will say "thank you" in a most charming manner.

LOUISE DOOLEY.

A Twin Buggy and Ice Boxes Are Requested

BY SALLY JOY BROWN

An emergency request has come to us from a nurse who is interested in helping a young couple who live in one of the poorer south side areas. The husband, who is home on leave, is expected to return to maritime service shortly. Their twin sons were prematurely born and still are in the hospital but gaining so well that plans are being made for their early release. However, the home has no ice box and, before bringing the infants home, the nurse is anxious that one be obtained to guard their milk against spoilage. A twin buggy which will make it possible for their mother to take them to the welfare station also is an essential which the young parents have been unable to buy.

A social worker referred to us the B. family, which includes mother, father, and three children—a baby girl, 16 months old, a boy 6, and another son serving in the navy. Two years ago the father became ill, and since that time has been unemployable. The home is lacking in several ordinary conveniences, among which is an icebox. A 50 or 75 pound capacity box would fill the requirements, and the worker can arrange cartage for a south side offer.

TRIPPI TO LEAD ALL-STARS IN PACKER GAME

SQUAD CONFERS HIGH HONOR ON GEORGIA BACK

Barwegen, Harmon Nurse Injuries

Honor Roll

CAPTAINS of All-Star football squads and their positions and universities follow:

1934—George Sauer, full back, Nebraska, and Ed Krause, tackle, Notre Dame.
1935—Miller Manjas, quarter back, Pittsburgh.
1936—Riley Smith, quarter back, Alabama.
1937—Sammy Baugh, quarter back, Texas Christian.
1938—Vic Markov, tackle, Washington.
1939—Bowden Wyatt, end, Tennessee, and Bill Osmanski, full back, Holy Cross.
1940—Harry Smith, guard, Southern California.
1941—Dave Rankin, end, Purdue.
1942—Bernie Crimmins, guard, Notre Dame.
1943—Dick Wildung, tackle, Minnesota, and Al Wistert, tackle, Michigan.
1944—Dick Barwegen, guard, Purdue.
1945—Charles Trippi, half back, Georgia.

BY WILFRID SMITH

Sgt. Charles Trippi, Georgia's star of its Rose Bowl victory over U. C. L. A. in 1943, will lead the All-Stars against the Green Bay Packers in Soldiers' field Thursday night. Trippi was elected captain of the college squad yesterday and succeeds Pfc. Richard Barwegen, Purdue guard, who was the choice of the 1944 All-Star men for last year's engagement with the Chicago Bears.

Barwegen, a member of this year's All-Star team, is not expected to play Thursday night because of the knee injury he received on the kickoff of the practice game at Great Lakes Saturday. Altho Barwegen's injury is not serious, too little time remains for him to recover completely from its effect.

Trippi's Election Acclaimed

Trippi's election was hailed enthusiastically yesterday noon at the North Shore hotel when Manager Billy Andrews made the announcement at lunch. Charley, a veteran of three All-Stars games, is immensely popular with the fellows. His quiet demeanor and intent application to the practice lessons match his superior ability as a player.

While Trippi was held out of Saturday's scrimmage by Trainer Carl Erickson because of a bruised side, he is expected to start the game with the Packers at the all important tail back sport. Trippi's running, as well as his passing and kicking, will point the All-Stars' opening attack against the professional champions.

Won Fame at Georgia

Trippi's college reputation rests on his sophomore year at the University of Georgia where he won a starting assignment for the last five games on a veteran team. Trippi also led Georgia against U. C. L. A., and he gained more ground in that game than all of his opponents.

Trippi's home is in Pittston, Pa., where his high school athletic career was a succession of records. He is equally proficient as a baseball player, and received a varsity award in this sport at Georgia.

Helped Beat Redskins

Trippi was a member of the 1943 All-Star squad which defeated the Washington Redskins, 27 to 7. Last year, when a fourth period field goal gave the Chicago Bears a 24 to 21 victory, thousands of fans will recall Trippi's brilliant last minute effort to field a long forward pass from Dobbs. While the ball was just out of reach, Trippi's speed not only carried him beyond the safety man, but added a final thrill where no other All-Star back could have come close to the ball.

Full Back Pass New Weapon

The All-Stars met yesterday morning to hear the coaches' report on their finals scrimmage at Great Lakes. Altho they won from the inexperienced Bluejackets, 35 to 0, the game was more rugged than the score indicates and there were many errors of commission and omission. Green Bay scouts—Johnny Blood, former Packer half back, was reported present—now should have an equally coherent account of the All-Stars' offense and defense.

In particular, Green Bay now knows that the college men have a full back pass just short of the line of scrimmage which is patterned on the famous Bronko Nagurski pass

PRO CHAMPIONS SWITCH DRILLS TO NIGHT SHIFT

Plan to Practice Under Lights

BY EDWARD PRELL
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Green Bay, Wis., Aug. 26—The Green Bay Packers today said farewell to the sun and prepared to go on the night shift tomorrow in winding up preparations for Thursday evening's gridiron date with the College All-Stars in Soldiers' field.

Chet Adams, army second lieutenant stationed at Camp Bullis, San Antonio, Tex., made a belated appearance and participated in the last daylight drill. Whether Adams will be able to bolster the well heeled tackle department after missing more than two weeks of practice is debatable. Adams at his best would be a valuable addition to the professional champions. He starred for the Cleveland Rams four seasons, then was lend-leased to Green Bay in 1943 when Cleveland suspended operations that season. Chet, 6 feet 3 inches tall and weighing 240, was an All-National football league tackle.

Hammond Is Out

Adams gives the Packers seven tackles and their average weight is 254 pounds. Ralph Hammond, rookie center from Pitt, definitely is out of the All-Star game from a knee injury suffered more than a week ago, so the Packers' list of eligibles remains at 38.

A classroom session starting at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning will launch the world champions' final phase of preparations. Tomorrow night they will drill under the City stadium lights. This program will be duplicated Tuesday.

Leave for Chicago Wednesday

On Wednesday morning the Packers will leave for Chicago and set up headquarters in the Knickerbocker hotel. That evening they will exercise briefly in Soldiers' field.

Today's activity developed to be a combination of defensive and offensive tactics. Line Coach Walt Kiesling instructed the linemen in proper spacing against various anticipated All-Star alignments. Meantime, Coach Curly Lambeau presided while the inevitable forward passing maneuvers were progressing.

Spend Time on Kick-Offs

The champions also spent considerable time on kick-offs. The college rule will be in effect, making it mandatory for five players on the receiving team to line up between their own 45 yard line and midfield. Glen Sorenson, guard, probably will do most of the kicking off against the collegians.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

BY ARCH WARD

IT MAY not be fair to single out stars on a squad to which only stars are invited, but maybe in this case it will serve a purpose. . . . This department often is asked for an explanation for the amazing success of the All-Star football game. . . . Year after year it draws capacity crowds at fancy prices and each time the spectator enthusiasm seems greater than on the previous occasion. . . . The robust support the enterprise has received from the fans of the nation is merely a reflection of the regard in which the game is held by young America. . . . Participation in the All-Star game long has been considered a glorious climax to a collegian's gridiron career. . . . Never has that fact been more clearly demonstrated than by two members of this year's squad—Capt. Tom Harmon of Michigan and Sgt. Charles Trippi of Georgia. . . . Both rank among the best backs football has developed in the last decade. . . . On Friday afternoon, Aug. 10, Harmon, a captain in the army air forces, was honorably discharged from service. . . . A few hours later he called this department from his home in California to inform us of his availability for the All-Star team. . . . It has been four years since the former Wolverine ace has worn a football suit. . . . His last important appearance was with the 1941 All-Star squad. . . . A lot of things have happened to Harmon since that sultry evening in Soldiers' field. . . . Twice he has cheated death in airplane crashes on opposite sides of the globe. . . . He was pilot of an army bomber when it crashed in South American jungles in 1943. . . . A few months later he was shot down behind Japanese lines in China after he had knocked two Jap planes out of the sky. . . . It took him 32 days of harrowing experiences to work his way back from enemy territory. . . . His legs still bear scar tissue from injuries incurred in that fight. . . . Harmon said he never could have survived either crash except for his training as a football player. . . . We don't know whether he intends to play professional football. . . . If he does, he definitely will be on the spot Thursday night. . . . Newspaper critics will be here from all over the United States. . . . Radio will carry the play by play to all parts of the world. . . . If Harmon has a good night, he again will be the biggest name in football. . . . If he doesn't click, many will think his gridiron days are over. . . . He could have side-stepped the situation, joined a pro club and taken his time about getting into competition. . . . But that isn't the way Harmon operates. . . . This is an opportunity and he asks only the chance to make the most of it. . . .

This will be Trippi's third All-Star game. . . . He came to Chicago first in 1943 after a brilliant season with Georgia's Rose Bowl champions. . . . He then joined the army air forces and has used routine furloughs the last two years to return to the All-Star game. . . . Last season he universally was recognized as the No. 1 back in football. . . . Trippi isn't satisfied simply to enjoy membership on the squad. . . . He wants his pals to share the thrill. . . . There are nine All-Stars this year from the 3d army air force, Trippi's unit. . . . Trippi recommended all of them. . . . With that kind of interest from two of the sport's headline figures it isn't difficult to understand why the All-Star game rolls thru the years the most popular contest of the season.

Sligo Bay

May all the ripples dance like flame upon a sea of gold,
And may the sunrise glorify our faces worn and wan
And make our happy hearts forget that we are growing old.

When we sail into Sligo bay may spring be in the air,
May billing birds spill harmony athwart the silent shore,
And may the waking woodlands fling their fragrance everywhere
As phantom dreams bring back to us the days that are no more.

May they be there to welcome us—the friends of long ago—
Whose sunny smiles had lighted up our hearts in other days,
And may we find within their eyes the soft supernal glow
That shone upon our yesterdays and warned us with its rays.

When we sail into Sligo bay—and O, may it be soon!
We'll drop the anchor silently and dock for the last time,
And if the land be heavy with the blooms of early June

Browns Drop Chicago Club to 6th, 3-2, 4-1

BY IRVING VAUGHAN
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]
[BOXES ON NEXT PAGE]

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 26—James Dykes' White Sox, still befuddled in the run production department, folded up twice today in front of the title holding Browns and the reward was an overnight, maybe longer, stop in sixth place. The Chicagoans hung on through ten innings before succumbing to a homer by Gene Moore in the first game, but they fell by the wayside quickly in the other game and eventually added a 4 to 1 trimming to their earlier 3 to 2 setback. And as a further aggravation, Mr. Dykes was bounced for the third time this season.

Because Thornton Lee complained of a heel injury, Frank Papish was given the first game pitching nomination at the last minute against Bob Muncrief, and the southpaw turned out a commendable job even though not able to finish what he started. For seven innings he yielded only three hits, but the Browns piled on three more in the eighth when they tied the score for the second time. Two more hits in the ninth forced him to the sidelines to make room for Earl Caldwell, who was on the job when Moore exploded his inside the park homer.

Dykes in Right Field Seat

The reduction of Mr. Dykes from a uniformed strategist to a mere grandstand spectator occurred in the ninth inning of the first game. The Sox thought Umpire in Chief George Pipgras had missed a strike on Lou Finney and, even after the latter had grounded into a force play, Dykes continued to issue oral communiques from the bench. But Pipgras apparently wasn't interested. He shooed the manager away, the latter turning up later in a right field seat and watching while the Browns slapped John Humphries and John Johnson in the second game.

The first game opened auspiciously enough for the Sox when Moses led off against Muncrief with a double. He went to third on Farrell's infield out and scored on Schalk's fly. The Browns had this run back in the next inning which opened with a pass to Laabs. Papish retired the next two men but encountered bad news in Mancuso, who singled to left, Laabs counting.

Sox Regain Lead

The run that put the Sox back in front for a few minutes in the eighth started with a single by Moses, his third hit of the game. After Farrell had popped out, Schalk survived on Stephens' fumble of what could easily have been judged a hit. Dickshot singled to score Moses, but Schalk overestimated his leg power and was nailed trying to reach third. Cuccinello ended the incident by fanning.

Stephens plunked a double to center to launch the Browns' eighth, was bunted to third by Laabs, and crossed the plate on Christman's single. Then after singles by Gutteridge and Byrnes in the ninth and with one out, Caldwell came to the rescue of Papish. He concluded the inning without further mishap, but after getting one out in the 10th met up with the decisive Moore homer, the ball rolling to the center field wall and not arriving back at home plate until after Moore had scored.

Five Successive Hits

The Browns turned loose nothing short of five successive hits to touch off the scoring in the third inning of the second game. Potter singled with one out. Gutteridge also singled and Potter was nipped when he overran second on the blow. This break didn't encourage Humphries. Finney singled and Moses fumbled long enough to let Gutteridge reach third. Byrnes drove in the two runners by tripling, and Byrnes scored when Moore singled.

The Sox put on a scoring act in the fourth, getting a run on Schalk's single and Dickshot's double, but the Browns took over again in the fifth. They counted one against Johnson on Finney's double, which followed Farrell's error on Gutteridge.

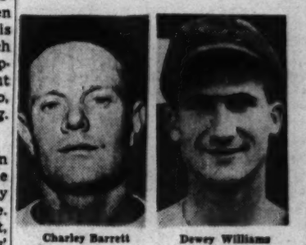
Hasten, doctor, pray hasten—the smelling salts! The world champion Cardinals spanked the long impertinent Cubs again yesterday, 5 to 1, for a sweep of the series. A crowd of 42,998 paid to see the Cards take the third game of the series in Wrigley field and shave the asthmatic Cubs' lead to 2½ games. [Really two games, counting the probable outcome of the suspended gum up game with the Dodgers.]



Charley Barrett Dewey Williams

Charley [Red] Barrett held the swooning contenders to five hits and would have accomplished the second St. Louis shutout of the series but for Dewey Williams' home run at the start of the eighth inning. Barrett, who opened the season with the Braves, thus became the league's winningest pitcher as he lifted his total to 19 victories, surpassing the 18 total on which the Cubs' Hank Wyse has been stuck for 13 days. Barrett yielded singles by Harry Lowrey and Phil Cavarretta with two out in the first inning, a single by Paul Gillespie with one out in the fifth, Williams' homer and a double by Cavarretta with two out in the ninth.

Cubs Use Four Pitchers

The Cubs employed four pitchers, Paul Derringer, the loser; Claude Passeau, Wyse, and Bob Chipman. Several of the quartet were not bad and not good, but like the Cubs' pitchers in the first two defeats they did not appear to be suffering from anything like the chokes that overcame the offense thruout the series—a series in which the Cubs made a grand total of two runs, one to duck a blanking in the eighth inning Saturday and Williams' homer yesterday.

The flop yesterday was the fifth straight for the Cubs since they beat the Giants twice a week earlier to go 7½ games ahead of the Cardinals.

Nine More Cub-Card Games

The Cards now have won within one of the Cub total, and have nine more whacks at the Cubs, seven of them in St. Louis and five in night games. The current standings involving the two teams show 10 victories for the Cardinals and three for the Cubs. The latter have won no night games this year except after warming up in twilight-night encounters with the eighth place Phillies and the seventh place Reds. They have blown all their seven single night games, such as those to which they will be exposed in St. Louis.

The Cards didn't make an earned run in the first two games of the series just ended and the run they

Nelson Wins Open Tourney in Knoxville

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 26 (AP)—Byron Nelson of Toledo, O., won the Knoxville Open Golf tournament today with 10 strokes to spare.

The victory was the 15th in 20 starts for the sharpshooting former Texas caddie. The top prize of $2,666.67 in war bonds sent his 1945 money winnings past the $50,000 mark.

Nelson turned in a final round of five under par, giving him 276.

Byrd had a windup 70 for a 286. Hogan dropped to a 2-over, 74, which left him with 287.

Freddie Haas Jr., New Orleans amateur, earned a tie at 288 with Harold [Jug] McSpaden of Sanford, Me.

Vic Ghezzi followed at 289, after posting a 72. Bracketed at 291 were Ky Laffoon of Chicago, who turned in a 75, and Sammy Snead of Hot Springs, Va., who rallied after a bad start to bring in a 73.

Other top finishers were Jimmie Hines of Chicago, with 75-292; Flight Officer Frank Stranahan with 75-293, and Tony Penna of Dayton, O., with 78-293.

Playing almost matchless golf before a crowd of 3,000 Nelson fired a 3-under par 33 on the front and took a 2-under 34 coming back.

CARDS WIN, 5-1; CUT CUB LEAD TO 2½ GAMES

made in the first inning yesterday was unearned, more definitely so than the one with which the Cards won the first game and the three with which they won the second game. Al Schoendienst opened the game with a single to left, stole second, and went to third on Johnny Hopp's infield out. Buster Adams fanned, then Whitey Kurowski sent a grounder to Lennie Merullo. Lennie came up with the ball neatly but made a hysterical throw toward first which hit the ground some 12 feet in front of Cavarretta, Schoendienst scoring on what should have been the third out.

Delayed Double Steal Fails

The winning run was produced in the third inning. Hopp tripled to left center with one down and Adams walked. Kurowski fanned, but Ray Sanders singled to right, scoring Hopp and putting Adams on third. The Cards tried a delayed double steal but Adams was sunk at the plate.

Passeau took over in the sixth, and in the seventh the Cards nicked him for a run on Marty Marion's hit, a sacrifice by Barrett, and a single by Hopp. Wyse started the ninth and Marion again opened with a single and Barrett again sacrificed. Schoendienst singled, scoring Marion. Hopp walked and Schoendienst and Hopp advanced on a wild pitch. Adams flied to Bill Nicholson, scoring Schoendienst. Kurowski was hit by a pitched ball and Chipman replaced Wyse. Bob whiffed Sanders.

On their impending trip the Cubs will play the Pirates Tuesday night and Wednesday and Thursday afternoons. They will play the Cards Friday and Saturday nights and a double header next Sunday. They will play the beloved Reds in Wrigley field in a double header on Labor day.

Charles Trippi Named Leader of All-Stars

Tom Harmon Is Injured

While Barwegen is the only definite casualty of the Great Lakes game, Tom Harmon, former Michigan half back, also was injured. Trainer Erickson said yesterday, however, that he believed Harmon would be fit for duty Thursday night altho he will not be completely free of the handicapping injury by that time.

The All-Stars attended the Cubs-Cardinals game yesterday afternoon in Wrigley field. There will be a lecture this morning and an afternoon drill. Tomorrow morning's lecture will be followed by a night session in Soldiers' field which will mark the conclusion of preparations for the 12th All-Star game sponsored by The Chicago Tribune Charities.

Tulsa Back Is Satisfied to Clear the Way

Charley Mitchell of the University of Tulsa is ready to play his unsung hero's role of blocking back when the College All-Stars meet the Green Bay Packers in Soldiers' field Thursday night.

Mitchell, who started at quarter back for the collegians in the scrimmage at Great Lakes last Saturday, hopes to be chosen by Head Coach Bernie Bierman for the opening assignment against the Packers. The 185 pound blocker played in all of Tulsa's nine games last season, starting in six.

A native of Neosho, Mo., Mitchell was graduated from Tulsa last June and already has signed to play with the Chicago Bears this fall. Mitchell, 24 years old and 6 feet tall, carried the ball only a few times during each of the two seasons he played at Tulsa. He played at Southwest Teachers' college, Springfield, Mo., before transferring to Tulsa.

Trainer Carl Erickson of Northwestern and his assistants have started a search for gondola sized football shoes for two giant members of the All-Star squad—Clyde Johnson, Kentucky 270 pound tackle, and Don McCafferty, Ohio State tackle—for the game Thursday night. McCafferty wears size 13½ and Johnson 12½.

Sgt. Roman Bentz, Tulane tackle, whose home is in Horicon, Wis., will return to Camp Crowder, Mo., immediately after the All-Star game. Bentz serves as an athletic instructor at the army post. He handled part of the All-Stars' kick-off duties against the Bluejackets Saturday.

While playing for Tulane, where he averaged 60 yards on kick-offs one season, Bentz, 25, 6 feet 2 inches tall, also won letters in track and baseball at Tulane. He will join the Washington Redskins after receiving his army discharge.

WAUKEGAN CO.'S FOURSOME WINS I. A. G. A. TITLE

The American Steel and Wire company, Waukegan, yesterday won the low gross team title in the third annual Industrial Amateur Golf association's tournament at Itasca Country club. The winning foursome, consisting of Joe Sisolak, Frank Ogrim, Stanley Hodnik, and John Strasser, had an aggregate card of 320. Johnson Motors, Waukegan, took second and Douglas Aircraft third.

Ed Slobe of Johnson Motors turned in a 75 for low individual honors. Sixty foursomes from industrial plants in Chicagoland participated in the meet.

EXPECTS FEW SERIOUS SNAGS IN CONVERSION

Banker Brown Says Capital Is Ample

BY THOMAS FURLONG

Edward E. Brown, chairman of the First National Bank of Chicago, said yesterday there is excellent promise the reconversion period will be bridged without serious economic difficulties.

He said the key to the situation is the speed with which industry gets back to a normal production basis. He believes the changeover will be made faster than was generally believed possible a few months ago.

"The Truman administration appears to be definitely committed to cutting away the war time economic controls as rapidly as it can be done, giving industry and business the chance to furnish the maximum employment possible," he asserted.

May Not Need Big Spending

"This policy offers the best promise that we will be able to avoid a resumption of big government spending for job making purposes."

Brown said some of the reconversion problems foreseen months ago do not bulk large now. For example, it was commonly believed that cancellation on short notice of war contracts would leave manufacturing companies with working capital tied up in unusable inventories.

"This has not turned out as we foresaw," he said. "Most established companies are in good financial condition and are not in need of credit. Generally speaking industry has ample working capital to finance normal production."

Aided by Advance Discussion

Brown believes the advance discussion of the difficulties that threatened with contract cancellation helped industry prepare for that event.

"Obviously a period of serious and protracted unemployment would make it difficult politically for the administration to avoid large expenditures for relief and other projects designed to furnish jobs," he said. "There seems to be a good chance that the administration will escape this pressure by doing all it can to foster quick expansion in employment in private industry and business."

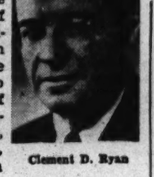
Ryan Leaving Ward; Heads Store in West

Clement D. Ryan, president of Montgomery Ward & Co., yesterday announced in a statement his resignation both as president and as a member of the Ward board of directors. In conjunction with Spiegel, Inc., he announced also the purchase of the Whitney Department store, San Diego, Cal., established in 1905.



Clement D. Ryan

The announcement said Ryan would operate the San Diego store "autonomously" and that policies and personnel would be unchanged except that he would take over active management from Gulliford H. Whitney. Ryan has been with Ward since 1932 and was elected president in October, 1943.

Ryan's wish to leave Ward was made known at the annual meeting of the company in April. Last month Sewell L. Avery, Ward chairman, disclosed the company was negotiating with Justin W. Dart, president of United Drug, Inc., as successor to Ryan, but Dart said recently that he had refused the Ward offer. Avery said last night that no arrangements for a new president had been completed.

Spiegel, Inc., in the last year has acquired a number of retail outlets in various parts of the country, including several chain store organizations.

OPA TELLS ITS RULES FOR NEW MANUFACTURERS

Washington, D. C., Aug. 26 [Special]—The OPA today outlined two methods by which new small manufacturers may establish ceiling prices for consumer goods, other than clothing. The calculations must be submitted to OPA district offices for approval after Sept. 5. The rules apply to businesses established since Sept. 1, 1944, with anticipated annual net sales of $200,000 or less.

Under one method, manufacturers may select a product comparable to theirs, adopt the ceiling in effect for it, and make "appropriate" additions or subtractions for material differences in cost of production.

Under the other method, manufacturers must estimate total current production costs and add a profit factor supplied by OPA. This factor is OPA's calculation of average peace time profits of the industry. After three months' operating experience, the new manufacturer must recompute his ceiling prices, replacing estimates with actual costs incurred during that period.

AMERICAN RADIATOR

Please give me a report on American Radiator and Standard Sanitary corporation's outlook.—G. U.

Building activity in this country is expected to reach record levels as sufficient materials and labor become available, creating large demands for such products as the company's heating and plumbing equipment. Europe's reconstruction and modernization also are expected to produce much business.

Sales abroad normally accounted for about one-fourth of the company's total volume. Besides 28 plants in the United States, A. R. & S. S. has seven in France, three in Germany, two each in Canada and Italy, and one each in England, Switzerland, and Belgium. Some of the European plants were damaged in the war.

At about 16 the common stock is high in relation to pre-war earnings, which averaged about 40 cents a share for the four years ended with 1939. After Pearl Harbor the company was engaged largely in war work. Earnings per share were: 1944, 64 cents, including about 12 cents a share profit on the sale of the Spanish subsidiary; 1943, 51 cents; 1942, 52 cents. In 1941 the company earned 73 cents a share and in 1940, 70 cents.

Common dividends subsequent to 1942 have been at the yearly rate of 40 cents. Net working capital at the end of last year was $59,400,000. Outstanding are 10,043,291 common shares, 43,864 $7 cumulative preferred shares, callable at $175, and $2,500,000 long term notes.

Truck Output at Pre-War Rate Predicted Shortly

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 26 (AP)—Richard T. Purdy, manager of the motor truck division of the Automobile Manufacturers' association, said today that production and employment in the truck industry by the end of 1945 should be close to the average levels of the biggest peace time year the industry ever experienced. He said the industry will have to operate at record levels for several years to catch up with accumulated demand for trucks. Peak production was 891,000 units in 1937.

American Smelting Earns More in First Six Months

American Smelting and Refining company and subsidiaries yesterday reported consolidated net income of $6,466,747, or $2.15 a share, for the first half of 1945, against $4,223,967, or $1.13 a share, in the first six months of 1944.

Predicts New Studebaker in Early October

South Bend, Ind., Aug. 26 [Special]—Cancellation of military contracts and the removal of war time production controls will enable Studebaker corporation to resume passenger car production early in October, K. B. Elliott, vice president in charge of sales, said today.

Elliott said output would be concentrated on the Champion, the company's offering in the low price field, and would exceed the quotas authorized by the war production board several months ago.

Engine Line Intact

"The Champion engine was used to power the Studebaker military personnel and cargo carrier known as the Weasel," Elliott said. "As a result, the Champion engine line remained intact thruout the war and its output now can be diverted exclusively to civilian use."

Elliott said the 1946 Champion will be distinctively new in appearance and will incorporate improved riding qualities. It will be offered in four body styles, four door, two door, and two coupe models with a wide choice of colors. Elliott did not disclose prices or dates for delivery to dealers.

Other Production Later

Production of the larger and more expensive cars in the Studebaker line will be resumed at an unannounced date.

"Production facilities for our higher priced models had to be dismantled to provide war production facilities quickly," Elliott explained. "Consequently their manufacture will be resumed later, as it must await the rearrangement of facilities and the procurement and delivery of new machines and equipment."

CHICAGO JOBS GAIN IN WAR THO POPULATION DIPS

Despite a drop of 85,000 persons to 4,735,000 in the civilian population of the Chicago industrial area between April, 1940, and the end of 1944, the number of persons employed rose 381,000 to 2,261,000, an analysis of the war's effects upon Chicago's population and working force disclosed yesterday. The analysis was part of a study of war time economic changes in the area and their post-war implications, jointly sponsored by the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, the Chicago Association of Commerce, and the Committee for Economic Development.

At the end of last year, 98.3 per cent of the total labor force was working, compared with 85.9 per cent during April 1940. The increase was accompanied by a gain of nearly one-third in the ratio of women workers to the total number employed. Women represented 37.4 per cent of employed persons against 28.5 per cent in 1940.

MANY ILLINOIS PLANTS FULLY RECONVERTED

Short Supplies Cut Some Production

The regional war production board yesterday reported 1,450 war plants in Illinois have fully reconverted to normal production and are giving full employment to war time employes.

The board said many factories are running at capacity, but others are curtailing production because of shortages of steel, copper, brass, lead, tin, lumber, and paper, or for lack of workers.

Foundries Behind Schedule

Foundries in Chicago and other cities in the 6th region are six to nine months behind in civilian deliveries and need both skilled and unskilled labor. One plant was said to have enough orders to work four years at capacity. The tool and die industry was reported working two and three shifts a day.

The American Can company said it had permanent jobs for 900 to 1,000 workers at its central division plants, including 150 to 200 at the factory in Maywood, Ill., which produces containers for perishable foods.

Pachner & Koller, 3450 Archer av., manufacturer of fishing tackle, is seeking about 40 women for factory work and another 10 for office jobs.

Report 91,800 Layoffs

Government agencies reported 91,800 workers have been laid off since the end of the war because of contract cancellations and cutbacks. The Jap surrender brought 123,240 persons to the 18 offices of the United States employment service in the Chicago area. Of the total, 103,860 came last week, two or three times the normal number.

The big task of handling job seekers has prevented the USES from determining the number of jobs available, but a report is expected early this week.

MORE SALMON AVAILABLE

The department of agriculture said the civilian supply of canned salmon from the 1945 pack has been increased 7½ million pounds because of reduced military requirements.

LOYALTY OATH FOR GLOBAL AIR STAFF PROPOSED

Seeks Allegiance Only to Organization

BY FRANK HUGHES
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 26—Recommendations before the personnel committee of the provisional international civil aviation organization call for the creation of a "truly international staff, owing allegiance only to the organization," it was learned here today.

The committee, under the chairmanship of Czechoslovakia, is scheduled to make a public report on methods and conditions of employment for the global air organization's secretariat on Wednesday.

The recommendations, drafted by the Canadian preparatory committee, call for this secretariat of men and women without a country to subscribe to the following oath:

"I solemnly undertake to exercise in all loyalty, discretion, and conscience, the functions entrusted to me as an employe of PICAO [provisional international civil air organization], to discharge these functions to the best of my ability and to regulate my conduct with its interests alone in view, to abide by the rules laid down by the organization so long as I am in its employ, and not to seek or accept from any authority external to PICAO any instructions in regard to the discharge of my official responsibilities."

Seek Canada Recruits

The recommendations add that "the lower grade staff will probably be recruited in Canada with the idea that such personnel will not acquire a special international status."

The recommendations propose, however, that the oath be sworn to by all, and that "all employes of the organization shall avoid any action and, in particular, any kind of public pronouncement which may reflect upon their position as international officials, either in their own countries or elsewhere."

Whether these conditions of employment would require the staff members to forswear their national citizenship and become "citizens of the world" is not discussed.

In the case of United States citizens, however, the nationality act of 1940, section 401, says: "A person who is a national of the United States, whether by birth or naturalization, shall lose his nationality by . . . taking an oath or making an affirmation or other formal declaration of allegiance to a foreign state. . . ."

It would be up to the courts to decide whether the oath of loyalty to PICAO constitutes an oath of loyalty to a foreign state.

The recommendations set salary scales in the top four grades of specialists at $7,000 to $14,850 a year, with most of the experts drawing between $8,800 and $13,200 a year.

Discusses Income Taxes

The preparatory committee's report also discusses the possibility that the international employes may be exempt from income taxes.

The 20 nation council, which is a board of directors of the international air organization, has been meeting here since Aug. 15, and plans to take a month's recess about Sept. 1.

Kidnap Guard, Drive Him Home, Collect $420 Loot

JAP SURRENDER TO BE COVERED BY RADIO FORCE

NBC's entire force of correspondents in the Pacific is converging upon Japan and China to bring eyewitness accounts of the signing of the Jap surrender document and describe the initial phases of the occupation of Japan. W-G-N also will broadcast a 15 minute program at noon tomorrow from the La Salle st. entrance of the city hall, where Mayor Kelly will present Gen. de Gaulle with an official city of Chicago scroll. De Gaulle's speech also will be broadcast at 11:30 p. m. today over WMAQ-NBC.

Claudette Colbert and Ray Milland will co-star in "Practically Yours" when the Radio Theater returns to the air for its 11th year at 8 p. m. today over WBBM-CBS.

Two Ton Baker, Chicago's prodigious pianist and entertainer, will make his debut at 4:30 p. m. today in a new Monday thru Friday show over WBBM. Marjorie Lawrence, Metropolitan soprano, will make her first radio appearance since returning from an overseas tour at 8 p. m. today over WMAQ-NBC. She will highlight her portion of the program with a group of Scottish songs, including "Loch Lomond," and "I Love a Lassie."

Burgess Meredith, recently discharged from the army, will appear on the "Cavalcade of America," opening the new season, at 7 p. m. today over WMAQ-NBC. Meredith will star in the dramatization of one of the most important behind-the-scenes preparations for the invasion of the French coast by allied forces. ROBBER TO FACE THEFT CHARGES AT PENAL FARM

Kenneth Altenburg, 22, the burglar who operated from the basement of the First Methodist church in Evanston and hid six suitcases of stolen goods under the pastor's porch, was returned yesterday to the penal farm near Vandalia, Fayette county.

He was sentenced to the farm a year ago on three convictions of petty larceny, but escaped Aug. 14 and returned to Evanston, after stealing a shotgun, a rifle, five pistols, and four watches, valued at $700, from the warden's office. He lived last week in the 12 room home at 1714 Hinman av., Evanston, while the owner, Cyrus L. Garnett, corporation attorney, was vacationing with his family in Wisconsin.

Police found Altenburg hiding under a bed Saturday, after which he led them to the home of Dr. Ernest Fremont Tittle, pastor of the First Methodist church, where Altenburg had stuffed the suitcases, loaded with valuables from Garnett's home, under the porch. Evanston police said Altenburg will be prosecuted in Fayette county on charges of escaping from the farm and burglarizing the warden's office.

STATE TO BUILD 1ST VET CENTER IN ELGIN: GREEN

Gov. Green announced yesterday that a war veterans' rehabilitation center at the Elgin state hospital will be the first unit constructed under a $7,988,000 appropriation. In his monthly radio speech, the governor said the center was part of the state's effort to help returning veterans, of whom more than 30,000 already have been served by the state veterans' commission.

Coördination of the state-wide housing program will be sought here Wednesday at a meeting called by the state housing board, the governor said. Spokesmen for federal agencies and officials of downstate cities interested in getting part of a 10 million dollar state appropriation for slum clearance will attend. Sample surveys have been started at Decatur and Lincoln to see what downstate cities need.

Illinois was "fully prepared and alerted" to handle the problem of reconversion, Gov. Green said, and added: "When it came, the machinery that already was turning was thrown into high gear and we started across the structure of sound planning which bridges the gap between war and peace time economies."
